Water district board to reconsider support for Arroyo Seco dam

By JOE LIVERNOIS

MONTEREY PENINSULA Water Management District directors will reconsider their commitment to the proposed Arroyo Seco Dam Monday, June 13.

The board meets at 7:30 p.m. in Monterey City Hall and the continued board discussion of potential water projects is expected to resume when Director Ed Lee of Carmel asks the board to review its support for the proposed $150 million Arroyo Seco River project.

The board is expected to receive a reduced cost report from its consultant on the proposed San Clemente Dam project on the upper Carmel River. Bruce Buel, water district manager, said the report by Converse Consultants from San Francisco will state that an 18,000 ac. ft. dam at San Clemente would cost approximately $34 million.

An acre foot of water is 325,851 gallons. The various dam projects have been under consideration by the board as a means to provide additional water supplies to the Monterey Peninsula for future needs.

Converse already had prepared a preliminary cost estimate of $46 million for a 27,000 ac. ft. dam at San Clemente.

Though Lee told the Pine Cone/Outlook last week the latest San Clemente cost estimate is "higher than I expected it would be." He said he believes "San Clemente still looks to be cost-competitive" when compared to the Monterey Peninsula share of the proposed Arroyo Seco project.

'If people in our district remain in the assessment district for the Arroyo Seco project, they are going to spend $400,000 just for the initial design planning and the EIR for it,' Lee said. 'If the Arroyo Seco never goes through or if (water district directors) to ahead with San Clemente, we will never get that $400,000 back.'

The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District has joined with Monterey County and other peninsula cities in a joint powers agency to study and plan for the construction of a dam on the Arroyo Seco River with a 100,000 ac. ft. storage capacity. The total financial commitment of the water district would be about $400,000 for initial planning and study.

As a result, Lee said he would ask the water district board next week whether or not it wants to pull out of the Arroyo Seco project.

"If people in our district remain in the assessment district for the Arroyo Seco project, they are going to spend $400,000 just for the initial design planning and the EIR for it," Lee said. "If the Arroyo Seco never goes through or if (water district directors) go ahead with San Clemente, we will never get that $400,000 back."

Buel said a "rough guesstimate" of the Monterey Peninsula share of the $90 million bond expected to be needed to build the Arroyo Seco project would be about $6 million.

That assumes the water management district would contract with the County of Monterey for 5,000 ac. ft.of water annually from the Arroyo Seco, he said.

But Buel said the price of Arroyo Seco water to the peninsula would increase substantially because it would cost at least another $20 million to pipe the water from the Salinas Valley and to build a treatment plant.

AN EXPENDITURE of about $200,000 toward an EIR for proposed water projects, most of which will pertain directly to the San Clemente project, is expected to be included in the water district draft budget for 1983-84 when it is presented to the board next week.

The augmentation committee for the water district, of which Lee is chairman, recommended last month that about $100,000 of the approximately $350,000 in the program funding budget be spent on preliminary seismic work for the San Clemente Dam.

And the district budget committee, whose chairwoman is Director Nancy McClintock, recommended June 2 to include the expenditures for the environmental impact report.

In April, the water district board agreed to initiate the EIR process for proposed water projects in the district, the most substantial of which is the San Clemente project.

Lee told the Pine Cone/Outlook he believes the environmental impact report should be completed and an appropriation for water from the California State Water Resources Control Board obtained for the San Clemente project.

The water resources control board will not appropriate water without an EIR and a more thorough estimate of the cost of a project can only come after the water resources control board states what conditions it will impose on a new project, Lee said.

"My position is that we should get the EIR

SWIMMERS AND ROCK climbers found plenty of recreational activities in a portion of the Arroyo Seco River gorge that would be inundated with water if a dam is built in the so-called "Pools" site of the river. The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District Board of Directors will be asked June 13 to reconsider its commitment to its share of the dam that would provide about 100,000 ac. ft. of water to Salinas Valley and North County farmers and about 5,000 ac. ft. to Monterey Peninsula water consumers. Valley fire danger

Dear Editor:

My purpose in writing concerns a situation that is serious and badly needs attention. A few weeks ago, a house was destroyed by fire at the junction of Esquiline and South Bank. The fact that it happened when everything was soaking wet prevented what could have been a disaster.

I had reason to go to the Village that night and found the road blocked by fire equipment. It was a time of the evening when there was little traffic so a large problem did not result.

As you probably know, this intersection provides the only access to Hitchcock Canyon and both Upper and Lower Circles. Toward the Village, on Esquiline, there are two very narrow bridges within a few hundred feet. I have personally seen over a half dozen accidents on these bridges over the last six years.

At the intersection, the slopes on both sides of the canyon are very steep and heavily covered with vegetation. Up either slope, it is only a few feet to dwellings.

I have attended many sessions of the planning commission and board of supervisors when developments in the Robles have been discussed and have tried to use the fire danger as a principal reason for denial. I have written letters to the individual supervisors outlining the dangers but the construction of new homes has continued.

There are state laws denying construction of over two hundred homes in an area served by a single route of access. There are over 80 homes in Hitchcock Canyon alone.

A few years ago, the State Fire Marshal stated that the Robles Del Rio is a disaster waiting to happen. Since then, the problem has doubled.

It is certain that a fire starting in the vicinity of Esquiline and South Bank during the fire season has the potential of costing several dozen or more lives and destruction of much property. It will be impossible to get fire equipment in while a stream of people are trying to get out. A simple accident on a bridge will stop everything in and out.

I think the Valley has one of the best fire departments in the state but all the fire equipment in the world is no good when it can't be brought to the fire.

I don't know of any solution to this problem less than the spending of millions for the construction of alternate access routes. I do think that it is necessary that the public and officials be kept aware of this danger and that definite plans for the handling of people in the event of fire be made and given wide publicity. People are going to have to move toward open spaces in the Robles rather than try to get out across the river. I doubt that many are aware that a road is available down the river to the Garzas Road area.

Who's to blame?

Dear Editor:

Besides former Sen. Sam Hayakawa, there is at least one Japanese-American who is outspokenly against that $25 billion class action suit recently filed against the U.S. government for alleged damages done people of Japanese ancestory by sending them to internment camps following the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Shonin Yamashita of San Diego has published a manuscript that he has entitled, "It Had To Be So." As one of the interned, he speaks convincingly.

Yamashita insists that the internment was necessary in order to protect the Japanese-American community from the war-time emotional crisis created by the Pearl Harbor attack, the bitter battle for Corregidor, and the terrible Bataan Death March.

Yamashita placed the blame for any injustices or inconveniences done the Japanese-American community squarely at the feet of the Japanese war party headed by Togo.

His point of view is strengthened by an incident he recalls that took place at the Poston, Ariz. internment camp, where he was interned. On Dec. 13, 1942 the camp residents filed claims against the Japanese government to be conveyed to Japan by the Spanish embassy here in America.

1.) They demanded reparations from the Japanese government for all of the evacuees in the sum of $200 million.

2.) They demanded $4,000 for each evacuated Japanese subject for each year of retention.

Yamashita's point of view becomes even more complex when he reminds us of the Japanese American Evacuation Claims Act signed into law by President Truman back in 1948. The act gave those Japanese-American evacuees until Jan. 4, 1950 to file claims against the government for damages done them.

Some 23,689 internees filed claims, and those claims amounted to $131,949,176. As you have already concluded, Uncle Sam paid off by the millions.

Now, some 33 years later, we have some $25 billion in new claims. I'm not denying that some of those claims are valid claims, but there certainly seems to be an important question of responsibility.

Piccadilly more valuable

Dear Editor:

Last week's Pine Cone featured a story headlined, "Clint Eastwood Asks City Nod for San Carlos Project."

The story was about two new developments on the boards: the Eastwood project, which will encompass the Shell Fisher Gallery, a vacant lot, and the Nishi Nursery; and the McFarland project, which will cover the Union 76 gasoline station site.

Upon completion of these projects, we can expect at least 100 more cars a day to enter the business district, compounding our already strained parking problem.

I have no doubt they will be quality projects, but when will it all end? Will some persons still insist that the site of Piccadilly Park be sold and developed, quite possibly by someone less sensitive than Eastwood and McFarland?

In my opinion, the Eastwood and McFarland projects tend to make the Piccadilly site, located as it is in the heart of the business district, even more valuable for its intended use — a park for the benefit of Carmel's residents and visitors. We must not let it go!

Who wrote letter?

Dear Editor:

On June 2 a letter appeared in your paper signed S. Morse. I would like it to be known that that vicious letter was not written by this S. Morse.

Since that letter appeared, my telephone has not stopped ringing. The people in this community, the so called, "dumb taxpayers" who for years elected Fred Farr to the State Senate and now his son Sam to the State Congress are sincerely angered by that letter.

I am angered by that letter. I am angry that the Pine Cone did not take the responsibility to check the facts. The facts of the land transaction are a vicious and incorrect attack on Fred Farr and those others who generously saw to the dedication of 3,880 acres to the Nature Conservancy and the Save the Redwood League.

Pine Cone, you owe us an apology and you owe the community and the dignity of our representatives both present and past the responsibility of investigating and printing the truth!

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The Pine Cone/Outlook makes reasonable efforts to check the authenticity of every letter to the editor we receive. In the case of the letter to which Mr. Morse refers, numerous attempts were made to contact the only individual listed by the name of the letter signer in the telephone directory. Messages were left on answering machines at two different telephone numbers on more than one occasion but were not returned. Since our basic policy is to publish — not withhold — letters to the editor, the decision was made to publish the letter signed "S. Morse," despite unsuccessful efforts to verify its authorship. We regret any inconvenience its publication may have caused either Mr. Morse or Mr. Farr.)

A 'political job?'

Dear Editor:

It seems to me that if the Carmel budget was out of balance, it would be obvious even to the rank novice. For the council members to claim that they did not know it was out of balance is a convenient loss of memory!

I think Jim Bajari and Doug Peterson are getting a raw deal and that this is a political job headed by the new City Administrator Schmitz! I think this is very sad for Carmel.

'Excuses are limp'

Dear Editor:

Incredible! Members of city council claim they were not informed of the $600,000 discrepancy in the city budget! How can it be: the manager of the Carmel Branch, U.S. Post Office, and the former president of the Carmel Sanitary District cannot understand a balanced (or unbalanced) budget? Surely the two incumbents must have been somewhat informed.

Perhaps they all need new reading glasses, or a refresher course in basic math. Their excuses are limp.

We must give them credit, however, for sending Peterson to far-away-places, and for selecting an astute new city manager.

Who is to blame? We are. We voted for these council members. We should have been more informed. Let us be more wary in the future.

Some common sense prevails over Arroyo Seco dam idea

By ROBERT MISKIMON

THOMAS JEFFERSON, in outlining the blueprint for our democracy, expressed a simple faith in the innate good sense of the informed common man, and a belief that this reservoir of rationality would be the bulwark of our common welfare against the demagogue, the hustler, and the tin horn politician.

Surprisingly enough, and despite occasional indications to the contrary, this Jeffersonian faith more often than not has been justified. A recent case in point of how that belief operates is provided in connection with proposals to build a gigantic dam on the Arroyo Seco River.

A plan to construct an approximately $150 million dam on the Arroyo Seco River, with a storage capacity of about 100,000 acre feet (one acre foot is 325,851 gallons) has been picking up steam since county supervisors formed and implemented a joint powers agency to finance planning and environmental studies for this monster dam.

The theory all along has been that the Monterey Peninsula ought to participate in funding and construction of the Arroyo Seco dam because it would be able to supply enough water not only for agriculture in the Salinas Valley, but supposedly also for growth requirements of the peninsula.

The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, which had maintained a fairly cautious stance with respect to construction of a smaller dam on the upper Carmel River, flirted with the idea and committed as much as $400,000 in district funds to participation in the joint powers agency.

Part of the rationale for the participation of the water district in the project was based on cost projections which showed that the Arroyo Seco water might cost about the same — or even less — than water from another dam on the Carmel River financed solely by taxpayers within the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

A new set of cost projections from a consultant suggest that a proposed dam on the Carmel River with 18,000 ac. ft. storage capacity would cost about $34 million, considerably less than the $46 million estimated for a dam with 27,000 ac. ft. storage capacity. Per unit cost of water from a new San Clemente dam may compare favorably with water from the Arroyo Seco dam, it now appears.

Already, citizens on the Monterey Peninsula have renewed their interest in the Carmel River dam as opposed to the Arroyo Seco project. And directors of the water management district plan to take another look at their support for the Arroyo Seco dam when they meet June 13.

From the standpoint of political control over available Monterey Peninsula water supplies, and from the standpoint of cost — not to mention environmental effects — the San Clemente project seems infinitely preferable to the Arroyo Seco dam. We still need to be convinced that any dam is needed, let alone a behemoth of the ilk of the Arroyo Seco.

But it's encouraging that, just as Mr. Jefferson predicted, the citizens can and will sort out even complex issues such as this. The test of how effectively our democracy really works will be when the will of the people clashes with those of special interests.

Tourism provides dollars for culture in Carmel

By MICHAEL GARDNER

MORE THAN one out of every three dollars in the 1983-84 Carmel municipal budget will be generated by tourists who stay overnight in village inns, motels and hotels.

And those hostelry tax dollars will also provide the bulk of a projected $1 million "cushion" to fund unbudgeted projects or emergency expenses.

A public hearing on the proposed $5.7 million muncipal budget for 1983-84 will be conducted when the city council meets at 7:30 p.m. June 14 at Carmel City Hall, Ocean Avenue and Monte Verde Street.

Final adoption of the budget tentatively is scheduled for June 21.

While the city ponders more controls on tourist-oriented businesses through revisions in the general plan, the monetary benefits of those visitors are clearly indicated in the muncipal budget. (See related story, this issue.)

The proposed budget indicates the 8 percent hostelry tax will total more than $2.2 million in 1983-84. That is nearly 40 percent of the entire municipal budget.

Of the $2.2 million, $1.673 is allocated to the general fund for routine city expenditures. Another $728, 980 is set aside as a 'fund balance for 1984,' which means that if the city does not spend the money, it will be used as a foundation for the 1984-85 hostelry tax budget.

The enormous amount of revenues generated by the hostelry tax also enable the city to have a substantial reserve fund in case of emergencies and unbudgeted projects.

Of the $2.2 million, $1.673 is allocated to the general fund for routine city expenditures. Another $728,980 is set aside as a "fund balance for 1984," which means that if the city does not spend the money, it will be used as a foundation for the 1984-85 hostelry tax budget.

The $728,980 is actually less than the $952,804 listed as a beginning hostelry tax fund in the 1983-84 budget.

The city, however, is limited in its use of the hostelry tax funds.

Under city ordinances, the funds can only be allocated for:

- Amortization of the bonds issued to pay for the purchase of Sunset Center. The bonds are scheduled to be paid off in 1989.
- Cultural activities such as those at Sunset Center and the Forest Theater and finance work on parks, public facilities, municipal buildings and parking lots.
- Purchase of public parks and open space.
- General operating expenses. Expenditures in this area are limited based on a complex formula that accounts for funding of other city programs.

With the addition of another $285,000 in the general fund reserves for 1983-84, the city has more than $1 million in unallocated contingency funds.

A beginning balance represents funds that are not allocated for the budget year.

•

CITY ADMINISTRATOR Douglas Schmitz plans in early July to appoint a capital improvements project committee to review building needs in the city not specifically funded in the 1983-84 muncipal budget.

"The committee will look at what we're going to do and how we're going to pay for it," Schmitz told the Pine Cone/Outlook June 6.

There are several outstanding projects not in this fiscal year's budget that could expend all of that $1 million, Schmitz said.

The 1983-84 budget includes $340,000 for repairs to city buildings. However, a building survey of Sunset Center may indicate the need to spend more on repairs there than budgeted. The survey is not expected to be completed until mid-year, Schmitz said.

If the city decides to build a parking lot at Sunset Center, that money would have to come out of the $1 million reserve.

The $1 million will have to cover any cost over-runs in the $390,000 public restrooms and parking project under the proposed Lincoln Street Harrison Memorial Library annex project.

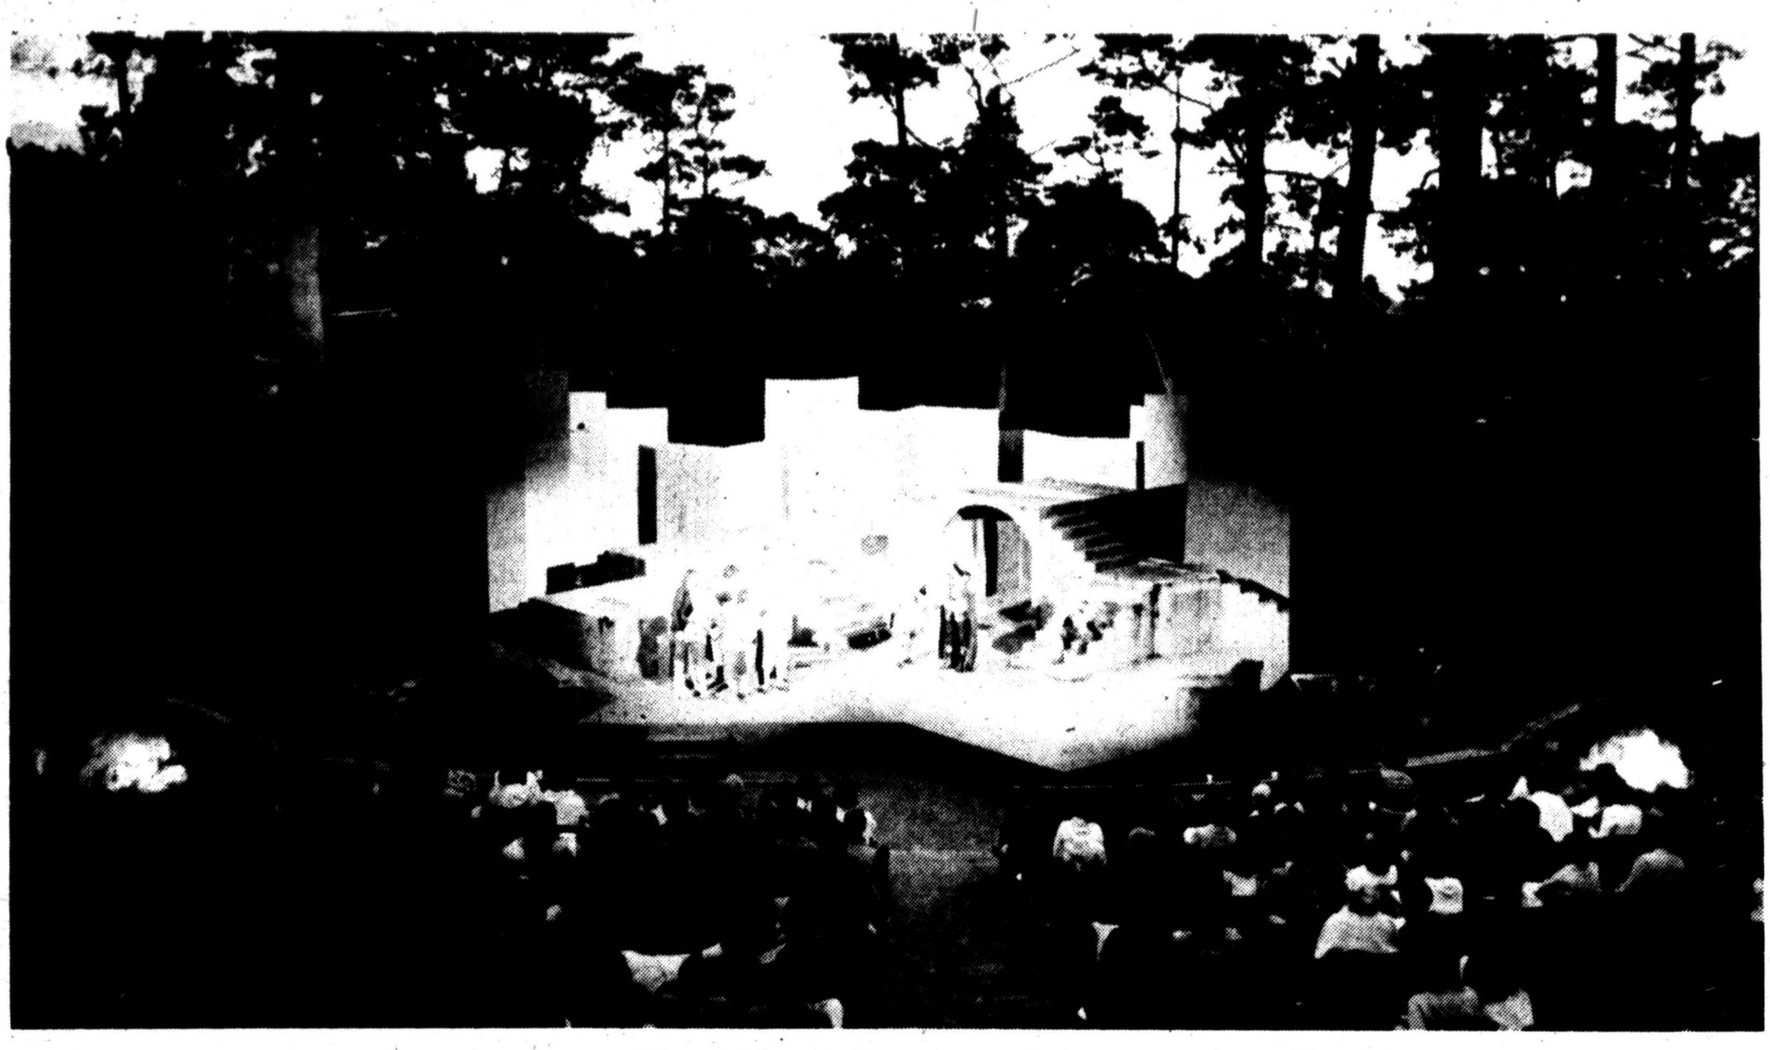
A comprehensive storm drainage and street repair project could also be funded out of the $1 million.

If the council proceeds with the Dolores Street Piccadilly Park project, the current $75,000 landscape budget also may not be enough, Schmitz added.

The council may also choose to allocate $280,000 of the $1 million for a plan to remodel city hall, which has been postponed because of the funding crunch.

In addition, the $1 million will have to cover any repairs to Carmel Beach over the projected $415,000 cost allocated in the 1983-84 budget, Schmitz pointed out.

The fire station and public works building also need repair, he said.



THE FOREST Theatre is one of many Carmel cultural facilities and activities that are financed through the hostelry tax funds generated by tourists staying in motels, hotels and inns in Carmel. The tax will generate an estimated $2.2 million for the city in 1983-84, according to the municipal budget that is to the subject of a public hearing when the council meets at 7:30 p.m. June 14 at city hall.

TOURISTS, DESPITE the headaches their burgeoning numbers cause, will provide the city with more than $2 million income in hostelry taxes alone in 1983-84. The funds are used to finance a variety of cultural activities and are used for parks and open space.

Carmel Planning Commission to discuss regulations on 'granny housing' June 15

LOW AND moderate cost housing regulations, a new commercial building downtown and an apartment complex on Junipero Avenue are to be discussed by the Carmel Planning Commission when it meets at 4 p.m., Wednesday, June 15 at city hall.

Commissioners are to develop another recommendation on regulations to restrict "second kitchens" and "granny housing" in the city.

The second kitchen and granny housing regulations have been bandied between the city council and planning commission for several months.

The issue was discussed once again during a June 9 joint meeting between council members and the commission on proposed revisions in the general plan. (See related story, this issue.)

Councilman David Maradei is the most vocal opponent of second kitchens and granny housing on the council.

Legalization of second kitchens and granny housing will open the city to "speculation" by developers "seeking only to make a buck," Maradei said.

"Immediately, it will change the scale of the community," Maradei said. "You won't walk on a street empty of cars; you will walk on a street lined with cars."

Enforcement of the regulations will be costly and inefficient, Maradei believes.

"The enforcement problems are self-evident, We're not even enforcing (the ban on) second kitchens now."

Maradei also repeated his claims that the proliferation of the small units will "destroy the residential character of the community."

The units should only be allowed in the commercial district and areas zoned for apartments (R-4), he pointed out.

"I would rather see rent control to provide low income housing," he said.

Councilman Robert Stephenson added that he is concerned about legalization of second kitchens that are rented now.

"To reward people who have been breaking the law is just not right," he said.

But Councilwoman Helen Arnold said tenants will suffer if the council does not legalize the units.

"Where will they go?" she asked.

Planning Commissioner John Logan replied that the units would remain "underground."

The joint session was for informational purposes only and no action was taken.

The commission, however, is scheduled to develop a formal recommendation June 15.

•

PLANNING DIRECTOR Robert Griggs has recommended that the city adopt one set of regulations that would apply to both types of housing.

The proposals would set a minimum 400 sq. ft. size limit for the units on an owner-occupied lot. Units detached from the main house would only be allowed on lots of 6,000 sq. ft. or more while attached units could be constructed on lots of 4,000 sq. ft. or more.

An off-street parking space would have to be provided, only two tenants would be allowed in the smaller unit, and low water use fixtures would have to be installed, under Griggs' recommendations.

There would be no age restrictions on tenants in the smaller units.

Rents would be based on federal Housing and Urban Development guidelines. Griggs predicted the rents would be in the neighborhood of $250 per month for both types of housing.

A second kitchen is usually defined as a room in the main house or detached garage that has a sink, refrigerator and stove.

Granny housing is a term coined in legislation sponsored by State Sen. Henry Mello (D-17th) of Watsonville. The bill sets a deadline of July 1 for cities to legalize granny housing.

City Atty. George Brehmer said it is "difficult, but not impossible" for the city to ban granny housing on the basis that it would be detrimental to the community.

There is a provision in the Mello bill that allows a city to ask for a 120-day extension of the July 1 deadline, Brehmer added.

In other action, commissioners on June 15 are to see a model and final design plans for a proposed old-fashioned "cottage row."

The new building is planned for the northwest corner of San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue, site of the current Union 76 gasoline station. The lease for the station expires Dec. 1.

Developer Craig McFarland of Carmel Valley envisions a building that has a series of individual store facades that will give the appearance of several different shops.

The old English architectural design will also use materials to make the shops appear as if they were constructed at different times.

In addition, commissioners are to review a proposed two-story, six-unit apartment complex on the west side of Junipero Avenue between Fourth and Fifth avenues. A single family home is currently on the site.

The project is to be developed by Earl Walls of San Francisco.

done and get the state appropriation," he said. "That will give us something concrete. Then the community can wait as long as it wants to build the project. But when it does want to proceed, it will have everything it needs to start."

The proposed budget allocations will come to a seven-member district board Monday that is expected to take on two new directors.

Director Al Gawthrop of Pebble Beach died last week while on vacation in Virginia. (See related story, this issue.)

Buel said the district board could possibly select his replacement on the board Monday. Gawthrop's term was to end in late November and at least three Carmel-area residents have announced their intentions to run for the water board in the November election.

•

BUEL SAID THE BOARD may wish to replace Gawthrop with one of the candidates or select a "caretaker" to fill in until November.

He said the district will accept letters of intent from persons who wish to fill the position until the day of the meeting.

The three Carmel-area residents who will submit their applications — and who are potential candidates for three water board seats in November — are Dick Heuer, a member of the citizen environmental group Carmel River Watch; Nick Lombardo, owner of Rancho Canada Golf Club; and Patricia Bernardi, also a member of Carmel River Watch.

All three said they support the initiation of an environmental impact report for the San Clemente project.

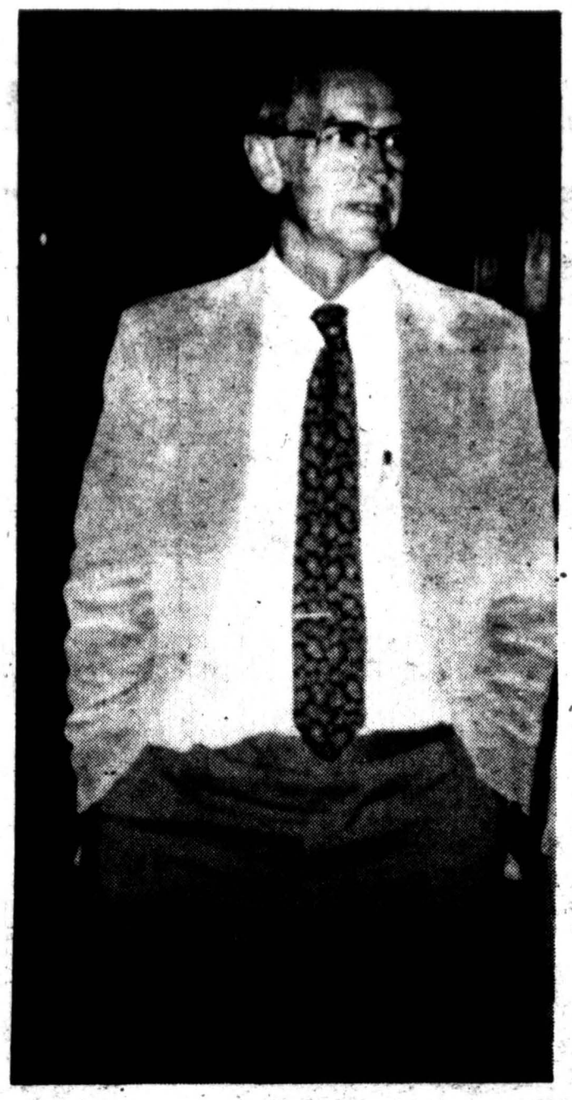
Also on Monday, Pacific Grove Mayor Florus Williams will be sworn in as a member of the water district board. He replaces former Monterey Mayor Jerry Fry as the Monterey Peninsula Mayor's Select Committee representative on the board.

The water district is also expected to accept the first reading of Ordinance 10, which would be the rules and regulations for the proposed Carmel River Management Zone.

Buel said that the action Monday will be the "first time" the district has taken an official action on Ordinance 10, though the board "has made about 15 policy direction decisions on it."

A mail ballot will be sent to the approximately 670 registered voters who live within the zone on June 27 and the return deadline is July 19.

By approving the first reading, Buel said, the board will give voters a chance to see how the river management plan will work before they vote.



DICK HEUER of Carmel Valley told Carmel River Watch members last week he supports the recent action by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District to draw up an environmental impact report for a proposed 18,000 ac. ft. reservoir at the San Clemente site of the Carmel River. Heuer said controlled water releases from the dam would help rehabilitate the river. Heuer is a CREW member and a possible candidate for the water management district board of directors. (Photograph by Joe Livernois.)

CV residents must register by June 20

Residents within the proposed Carmel River Management Zone not registered to vote must register by June 20 to vote in the mail election next month.

Monterey County Registrar of Voters Ross Underwood said a ballot will be mailed to each eligible voter on June 27. The deadline to return ballots is midnight July 19.

The election was called by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District to determine if the 10-year program for projects in the river management zone should be approved and financed in part by an assessment based on river bank frontage of property.

Only property owners with property along the river will be assessed, though everyone who lives in the proposed zone is eligible to vote.

Voters who will not be available to receive the mailed ballot between June 20 and July 19 may vote in person in a voting booth at the Monterey County Elections Department on 201 Main Street in Salinas, Underwood said.

Heuer named chairman of Carmel River panel

By JOE LIVERNOIS

DICK HEUER of Carmel Valley was selected chairman of the newly-created Carmel River Management Committee when the committee met May 23 in Monterey.

The committee was created to recommend policy to the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District through its proposed river management program.

The program has not yet been officially approved; about 600 voters within the river management zone must vote on it by mail ballot in July.

But water district directors created the interim committee, at least until the vote is tallied. Heuer said he is confident the zone will be approved by voters, especially after the Carmel Hacienda Homeowners Association, which represents about 100 voters, endorsed the program.

Heuer said the committee agreed that the district should 'proceed as rapidly' as possible to implement the program if voters approve the zone.

Much of the committee meeting last week was spent mulling over "informational organizational stuff," Heuer said.

But the committee also recommended to the water district board that it begin to solicit applications for the staff engineering position the river management program will create.

Heuer said the committee agreed that the district should "proceed as rapidly" as possible to implement the program if voters approve the zone.

The committee also recommended that the water district ask the county to use rocks from the landslide on Carmel Valley Road to stabilize the banks of the Carmel River east of the Schulte Road Bridge.

The Corps of Engineers has been given a tentative go-ahead to stabilize the river banks near the Schulte Bridge and has announced it would continue work east of the bridge up to the granite bluff "if someone would come up with another $30,000 to fund it," Heuer said.

"Our recommendation is not to come up with $30,000 but to ask the county to come up with rock from the slide. The Corps has indicated they would be willing to implace that rock on the banks near Schulte Bridge free of charge," he said.

•

THE COMMITTEE also formed a subcommittee to draft a list of work that could be done on the river banks that would be exempt from the permit process enacted by Ordinance 10, the enabling ordinance that states the rules and regulations of the river management program.

Subcommittee members include Heuer, Mrs. Pat Bernardi of Carmel Valley and Nick Lombardo, owner of Rancho Canada Golf Club in Carmel Valley.

Sickness plagued the first meeting of the river management committee and only four of the seven committee members were well enough to attend.

Robert Zobel of Carmel Valley, who was named to the committee by former Monterey mayor and water district director Jerry Fry, was absent because of illness. But the status of Zobel on the committee is still questionable because Fry is no longer a water district director, since he lost a recent bid for re-election as mayor of Monterey.

The water district officer is selected by the Mayors' Select Committee, which replaced Fry with Pacific Grove Mayor Florus Williams on May 20.

Also, Robert Greenwood of Carmel Valley was replaced on the river management committee by Janice O'Brien of Pebble Beach. Greenwood was originally selected by Director Alexander Henson to serve on the committee but he declined to accept because of previous travel commitments.

Mrs. O'Brien was an unsuccessful candidate for the water district board in 1981.

In other action by the river management committee, Lombardo was named vice-chairman of the committee.

Citizen conservationist says:

Small Carmel River dam may benefit environment

By JOE LIVERNOIS

A SMALL dam at the San Clemente site on the Carmel River may be environmentally beneficial, says a Carmel River Watch member who plans to run for the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District Board of Directors in November.

Dick Heuer told fellow CREW members June 2 he supports a new dam and reservoir at San Clemente with an 18,000 ac. ft. storage capacity as a way "to give us back our river." Carmel River Watch is a citizen environmental group concerned with the health of the Carmel River.

An 18,000 ac. ft. reservoir at San Clemente, a proposal now under consideration by the water district board, would provide approximately 5,000 acre feet of water to the Monterey Peninsula.

An acre foot is 325,851 gallons.

The rest would be held in storage, but the added water released from the dam throughout most of the year would assure a vital steelhead fishery in Carmel River and would protect the vegetation along the river, Heuer said.

The bad news would be the cost of the project, Heuer said. According to tentative figures released by the water district last week, an 18,000 ac. ft. dam would cost at least $32 million.

That translates, Heuer said, to an approximately $55 annual water bill increase for residential water owners. It also would mean that water connection fees for new construction could be as much as $10,000.

Armed with a slide presentation that spelled out expected water demand and cost comparisons provided to him by the water management district, Heuer said that new water will be needed to supply the amount of development anticipated within the boundaries of the water district.

•

AND HE MAINTAINED that the San Clemente project "is the most desirable alternative" to any other project the district has considered in the past five years.

When compared to the Monterey Peninsula share of the 100,000 ac. ft. Arroyo Seco project which is supported by Salinas and North County farmers and the Monterey County Board of Supervisors, the "costs are about even," Heuer said.

"The eventual decision will undoubtedly be an economic decision," Heuer said. "But it goes beyond economics. With the new San Clemente dam, new water will be released from the dam and we will have it for the steelhead and the vegetation."

He said he supports the water district decision to initiate the environmental impact report for the San Clemente project and said there are three reasons "to start talking about a dam now."

First, he said, the process of building a dam is so long and involved that "you've got to start now if you want a dam 10 years from now. It's realistic to believe there will be delays."

He said the water supply is adequate to serve present needs and that "you won't need water from the dam for another five, 10 or 15 years."

Second, he said, the standard argument is that "the longer we wait, the more expensive it's going to be." Heuer said he has "problems with that argument" because recent figures show dam costs are actually rising slower than inflation.

Third, water supplies to the peninsula generated from California-American Water Co. could be lost if the California Water Resources Control Board determines the water beneath Carmel Valley is an "underflow."

Are all public needs for transportation being met in Carmel?

By MICHAEL GARDNER

BY OFFERING a subsidized taxi system, the city can free more than $300,000 in state Transportation Development Act funds to rebuild Rio Road, say Carmel City Council members.

The council is to conduct a public hearing on the allocation of $448,900 in transportation funds when it meets in a special session at 7:30 p.m. June 14 at city hall, located at Ocean Avenue and Monte Verde Street.

'I think the only real unmet need is for the elderly and handicapped and the council has allocated $20,000 for a subsidized taxi service,' Councilman Maradei asserted.

The public hearing was called by Mayor Charlotte Townsend to determine whether residents feel their transportation needs are being met.

If the council finds that public transit needs are being reasonably met, state law allows the city to use the transportation funds for roads projects.

The city council wants to spend more than $300,000 of the money on reconstruction of Rio Road between Santa Lucia Avenue and Atherton Drive.

The base of Rio Road has been eroded and it is not economical to keep patching the street because the repair bills eventually will be greater than the cost of rebuilding, according to City Administrator Doug Schmitz.

Another $60,000 of state transportation funds would be spent on a storm drainage project near Mission Street and Fourth Avenue.

The remaining funds would be allocated for the city contribution to Monterey-Salinas Transit (about $19,000). Another $3,314 is to be spent on the county-wide van system for the elderly and handicapped.

At the insistence of Councilman Robert Stephenson, the council has also allocated $20,000 for a subsidized taxi system.

Details of the system are still being developed. Basically, it would subsidize taxi fares for senior citizens who need transportation within the city limits of Carmel.

The city offered the program several years ago, but it was discontinued after complaints that the subsidized fares were used for out-of-city shopping trips. In addition ineligible people used the taxi system.

The subsidized taxi system will help meet most transportation needs in the city, according to council members surveyed by the Pine Cone/Outlook.

Councilman David Maradei pointed out that results of last summer's city-sponsored survey of registered voters indicates citizens do not need additional public transportation.

•

MORE THAN one out of every two Carmel residents (53.6 percent) replied that additional transportation is not necessary in Carmel. About 40 percent of the respondents favor more public transit.

And, 1,282 (72.1 percent) citizens said that the current public transportation system is adequate while only 325 (18.2 percent) believe that there needs to be an improvement in the service.

"I think the only real unmet need is for the elderly and handicapped and the council has allocated $20,000 for a subsidized taxi service," Councilman Maradei asserted.

Workers who commute to Carmel probably would not use public transportation even if the city provided extra dollars to add more stops or additional buses, Maradei believes.

REPAIRS ON Rio Road have just been "patchwork" over the past few years and now it's time to spend more than $300,000 to rebuild the street between Santa Lucia Avenue and Atherton Drive, says the Carmel city council. (Joe Livernois photo.)

"They might. It would mitigate the parking problem somewhat, but I don't think that it will really solve anything," he said. "If everybody would take the bus, I'd say let's do it. People are just not going to do it."

Mayor Charlotte Townsend said results of the city questionnaire indicate people are satisified with the current system, which means the state funds can be used for the roads projects.

"If the people think the transportation needs are being met, I would say they are," she said.

Mayor Townsend cautioned that the subsidized taxi service needs a good deal of study before it is implemented.

"I hope that the money will be spent to meet those transportation needs inside the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea in the best and most efficent manner," the mayor said. "What that will be has to be carefully studied before we do anything."

The mayor supports the Rio Road project. "It would be a disaster if it isn't taken care of," she said.

"I think the taxi system, so long as it's not abused will be an asset," Councilman Frank Lloyd said.

But Lloyd wants to ensure that the city does not become entangled in another bureaucratic department that needs additional employees.

"I'm against any more personnel, any more unnecessary employees and cost. The city needs to resist hiring more personnel and when there's attrition, take advantage of it," Lloyd said.

"I imagine that we do have a need for this. We have had complaints from senior citizens that they can't get around," Councilwoman Helen Arnold said.

•

COUNCILMAN ROBERT Stephenson first proposed that the city revive the subsidized taxi system.

The county transportation van that costs $1 is just not convenient for residents because its hours of operation are limited and it does not go where citizens may want to go, Stephenson believes.

Transportation is unavailable for those citizens who want to attend city functions in the evening, such as activities at Sunset Center or city council meetings, said Sunset Center Director Richard Tyler.

"I think in the evenings perhaps we do not have the transportation necessary," he said. "I think it (a taxi system) certainly should be considered. We find that people want to come here but have no way to get here."

Janet McFadden, home services director for the Carmel Foundation, believes the subsidized taxi is necessary.

"I don't know if it would meet all of the needs, but I think it would serve an unmet need," she said. "I suspect that the transportation needs are moderately being met."

The city council should take into account complaints that there are too many employees who drive cars to work when it determines how to spend the transportation funds, Carmel Business Association President George Greenwood believes.

"As I understand the situation, the city must certify that there are no unmet transportation problems in order to spend these funds for road repair. It is difficult for me to believe that such a conclusion can be logically made," Greenwood said.

Greenwood cited parking problems in the city caused by tourists and employee/employer cars.

"What is especially frustrating is that each time a potential solution to the parking problem is advanced, in any form, it is always immediately dismissed for such reasons as: it wouldn't be appropriate, it would be unsightly, it wouldn't solve the problem, it would be expensive, and it wouldn't work, and the proposition, whatever it is, is abandoned with no professional study made of the actual feasibility of the proposal."

A combination of "in-lieu" parking funds and the transportation monies could "go a long way" to provide more parking in the city, Greenwood said.

In-lieu fees are generated by an assessment against businesses that cannot provide the city-required parking spaces.

Greenwood suggested the city should take care of the parking problem before the council spends the transportation funds on the Rio Road reconstruction.

The transportation funds are generated through state allocations to the city of one-fourth of one percent of the sales tax.

The city has accumulated the nearly $450,000 by not spending all of the money each year. The money is on deposit with the Monterey County Transportation Commission.

Chateau Julien the latest of new Valley wineries

By JOE LIVERNOIS

THE WINE INDUSTRY invasion of Carmel Valley will become substantially more visible when Chateau Julien opens this winter on Carmel Valley Road.

There is little hint that Carmel Valley does, indeed, house a share of the burgeoning wine industry in Monterey County.

But hidden behind the hills of Cachagua is the beautiful Durney wine estate and talk show host Merv Griffin is also attempting to get his mudslide-prone Carmel Valley vineyard rooted.

But construction of the 11,000 sq. ft. French country style winery five miles east of Highway 1 on Carmel Valley Road, anticipated to be completed by November, will become somewhat of a landmark in the Valley.

Chateau Julien will be located on seven acres between the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula and the egg farm on Carmel Valley Road, about five miles from Highway 1.

The winery will feature production facilities, including crushing, bottling and a cooperage capable of producing 25,000 cases per year, according to Ronald Barnes, marketing manager for Great American Wineries Inc., the parent company of Chateau Julien.

The facility will also include a wine tasting room and a gift shop, as well as Chateau Julien administrative offices.

'I can't think of a more beautiful setting,' Richert said. 'And it is also geographically centered, Grapes will come to us from as far north as Napa and Sonoma counties and perhaps as far south as Santa Barbara.'

"The whole kit and caboodle will be out there," said Patricia Brower, a principal shareholder in the company. The company offices are now located in the Clocktower Place complex in lower Carmel Valley.

The Monterey County use permit for the winery allows wine tasting "by invitation only" and Barnes said the winery will be open for tasting and tours seven days a week, but only by invitation.

Invitations may be requested by telephoning the winery, he said.

The parking lot on the site will allow parking for 14 automobiles, according to the use permit.

The Chateau Julien winemaker is Scott Richert, who describes himself as "a product of the old world school of winemaking."

His father was the former editor of Wine and Vines magazine who later formed the Richert & Sons Winery in Morgan Hill.

Richert opened the Souverin Winery with its first crush in 1973.

"It's very seldom a winemaker can say he has built a winery once," Richert said. "I've been privileged to open two."

While Richert is from the old school, he said the winery production includes "state of the art" facilities. "Everything we've invested in is brand new," he said, which he believes will give Chateau Julien the edge over many other California wineries.

•

"WE'RE NOT OPERATING out of a barn to start."

Despite all its modern equipment, Richert said his "old world" character will be a staple of Chateau Julien.

"We are very traditional, and our wines will blend a bit of old world with a bit of the new. We are marrying modern technology with the winemaker's art and marketing talent."

The winery will specialize in four table wines, including a Cabernet Sauvignon, a Chardonnay, a Merlot and a Sauvignon Blanc. The first crush of grapes to be bottled in Carmel Valley will come in October.

"And to round it out, we'll have a small select quality of champagne done in the French methode champanoise," in which the champagne is fermented in the bottle, rather than in the vat, Richert said.

"And the reason we are producing our own champagne is because we drink a lot of it and we're tired of drinking someone else's."

Once the winery is built, much of the rest of the Carmel Valley property will be planted with wine grapes that will produce a special estate-bottled heritage wine, Mrs. Brower said.

Why Carmel Valley?

"I can't think of a more beautiful setting," Richert said. "And it is also geographically centered. Grapes will come to us from as far north as Napa and Sonoma counties and perhaps as far south as Santa Barbara."

The Monterey County use permit for the winery allows wine tasting 'by invitation only' and Barnes said the winery will be open for tasting and tours seven days a week, but only by invitation.

Richert and Mrs. Brower also said they believe Monterey County will soon be considered one the finest wine-producing areas in California. Already, the southern portion of the Salinas Valley has experienced an explosive growth in vineyards, which now occupy thousands of acres formerly devoted to such crops as lettuce, celery and endive.

"I think there is a tremendous misconception about Monterey County wines," said Richert. "We've tasted dynamite wines from this county. We want to help develop that. We want to be a part of it.

"And I think the chateau really lends itself to the area. It will add a great deal to the locale and will be something residents here will be very proud of."

Barnes added that the location of the winery is not too far off the "beaten track" to attract visitors to the Monterey Peninsula.

"We anticipate a busy tasting room. We think it is a natural stop on the circuit for tourists.

"We look at this as a fine, clean business which will not be like an IBM plant sitting in the middle of the valley. The Chateau will blend in with the surroundings and will be an asset to the Monterey Peninsula."

CHATEAU JULIEN, an 11,000 sq. ft. winery on Carmel Valley Road, is expected to open for business in November. The winery will include production facilities, a cooperage and a warehouse, as well as a wine tasting room and a gift shop.

WHEN THE NEW winery on Carmel Valley Road opens, it will become the second California winery opened by winemaker Scott Richert. The Berkeley native said the most visible of Carmel Valley wineries will blend new technology with "old world" winemaking methods.

•

AND MRS. BROWER said that the winery could "expand the vineyard" in available areas through the Valley in the future. There are plans to install a small vineyard as part of the winery, but the bulk of the wines would be crushed from grapes grown throughout California, including Monterey County.

Marketing strategy is an important part of the operation of the new commercial winery.

Great American Wineries will give a barrel tasting of its first crush later this month in which restaurateurs and inn-keepers will have a first chance to sample the wine at Quail Lodge, Barnes said.

While sampling the wines, Barnes will tell them that Chateau Julien will ensure a steady allocation of wine to keep them in constant supply.

"In checking with restaurants, one of the biggest complaints I hear is their inability to keep their wine menu current," Barnes said. "While it is not difficult to get good local wine, it is difficult to maintain a good local supply. It has become a real dilemma.

"Our position is to get a good quality in adequate supplies."

Cultural commission to recommend community grants for 1983-84 year

THE CARMEL CULTURAL Commission is scheduled to have its recommendations for cultural and community grants ready for the city council consideration by June 14.

Richard Tyler, community and cultural services director, said the commission has received 15 cultural grant applications totalling $73,857 and 12 community grant requests totalling $40,800.

Carmel City Administrator Douglas Schmitz has recommended that the city give $40,000 to organizations that request community-related "social" grants and $40,000 to groups that seek cultural grants.

Though the grant ceiling included in the Carmel budget is tentative, cultural commissioner Natalie Murray said she expects the commission and the city will "scale back" some of the grant requests.

Cultural commissioners are scheduled to meet June 9 in Sunset Center to study applications for "social" grants.

This is the first year the cultural commission has been asked to make recommendations for social grants. In the past, a special committee selected by the Carmel mayor has made those recommendations.

Social grants include funds given to service agencies that provide for the "social needs" of the community, such as the Monterey Peninsula Youth Project.

Two Carmel residents, Lloyd Morain and Ann Borden, were selected by Carmel Mayor Charlotte Townsend to assist the cultural commission with the social grant process.

The cultural commission is scheduled to meet again June 13 for a public hearing on the cultural grant applications.

Tyler said 14 cultural grants — for a total of $49,500 — were given by the city last year.

Organizations that have applied for city social grants include Meals on Wheels, $5,000; Monterey Peninsula Planned Parenthood, $5,000; Rape Crisis Center, $4,500; Project WORTH, $5,000; Monterey Peninsula YMCA, $1,200; YWCA, $4,000; and Volunteers in Action, $1,200.

Also, Alliance on Aging, $1,000; Family Resource Center, $1,000; Buddy Program, $400; Monterey Peninsula Youth Project, $7,500; and Carmel Youth Baseball, $5,000.

Groups that have applied for city cultural grants include the Bach Festival, $6,600; Monterey County Symphony, $10,000; Children's Experimental Theater, $7,500; Hidden Valley Music Seminars, $7,500; Forest Theater Guild, $4,000; Lyceum, $2,500; and Carmel Music Society, $5,000.

Also, Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula, $2,500; Cherry Foundation, $4,000; Friends of Photography, $5,560; Monterey Dance, $2,000; Ballet Fantastique, $2,000; Monterey Youth Orchestra, $800; and Monterey Museum of Art, $1,089.

A CARMEL Business Association questionnaire of merchants indicates that most employees drive alone to work and would like the city to pay for a new parking facility at Sunset Center. Above, CBA president George Greenwood explained the survey to Seasons owner Carla Odello.

Survey shows workers want parking facility

MOST CARMEL workers and employers live in the immediate area, drive alone to work, and believe that the city should finance and build downtown parking facilities.

Those are the results of a just-completed survey of merchants conducted last month by the Carmel Business Association.

The questionnaire was developed to assist the Carmel Planning Commission and City Council with revisions of the 1973 general plan.

Commissioners are expected to complete their proposed revisions to the plan when they meet at 4 p.m. June 15 at city hall. (See related story, this issue.)

The proposed revisions will then be sent to the council, which is scheduled to begin public hearings in late July.

The Carmel Business Association questionnaire was distributed by volunteers throughout the downtown commercial district. There were 389 returns.

The returns represented 613 owner/managers with 1,741 employees.

Parking questions dominated the survey.

More than 1,700 employees of businesses which responded drive alone to work. Other transportation methods include: walking, 255; car pool, 182, bus, 144, motorcycle, 31; and bicycle, 18.

Nine out of 10 of the respondents (305) said a new parking facility should be constructed and 304 said the project should be built at the north end of Sunset Center.

There is a plan before the city to pave the vacant lot at the north end of Sunset Center and charge a parking fee. The plan is to determine whether employees will pay to park or simply move their vehicles to the unmetered residential zone.

The city should pay for additional parking spaces, said 235 of the respondents, while 102 believe that it should be a joint financial effort between the city and business.

Financing of the parking could be offset through a variety of means, according to the survey results.

User fees were mentioned by 171 respondents. Other funding sources suggested include: the implementation of an extra one-half cent sales tax, 66; or formation of a tax assessment district, 53. Forty-nine respondents recommended paying for a facility through a combination of an assessment district and the extra sales tax.

•

IF ADEQUATE parking facilities were provided, 203 respondents (60 percent) indicated they would accept a plan to ban employer/employee parking downtown.

But if the city fails to construct new parking facilities, 330 respondents (94 percent) would be opposed to the parking ban downtown.

The employee/employer parking ban proposal has since been deleted from the general plan revisions.

Most employees (468) park in the area southwest of San Carlos Street. Junipero Avenue and the adjacent residential zone is used by 429 respondents; 356 park in the area southeast of San Carlos Street; 328 use the Sunset Center parking lots and another 268 park in the northwest sector of the city.

Results of the survey indicate merchants are opposed to a ban on truck deliveries after 10 a.m. One hundred and ninety-one (56 percent) said they could not remain in business if the ban were enacted.

The ban was discussed by the planning commission in earlier general plan deliberations. Commissioners decided only to "investigate the possibility" of a ban instead of including language that would require the prohibition of truck deliveries after 10 a.m.

Business people, by a 305-to-39 margin, are also opposed to a plan to phase out all commercial uses that operate above another shop. The plan seeks to provide more apartments, offices and non-retail uses on the second story of business buildings.

This provision is still included in the proposed general plan revisions.

Respondents indicated that 853 employees or employers reside within the city of Carmel, 228 live in Carmel Valley while another 150 live in Pebble Beach.

Other hometowns of employees are: Monterey, 378; Pacific Grove, 269; Seaside, 225; Salinas, 69; Marina, 66; Highway 68 area, 19; and other, 90.

Planners ponder Big Sur River management plan

MONTEREY COUNTY Planning Commissioners were scheduled to hear testimony on two important components of the Big Sur Land Use Plan when they met June 8 in the Monterey County Courthouse in Salinas.

Watershed management plans for both the Big Sur River and Little Sur River were the focus of the planning commission hearings. The plans will be incorporated in the land use plan that will eventually be a part of the Big Sur Local Coastal Plan.

The plans resulted from California Legislature resolutions in 1973 that designated the Big Sur and Little Sur rivers "protected waterways."

The plans must be approved by the County of Monterey, the State Resources Agency and the Coastal Commission.

The draft copy of the Big Sur River plan advocates the creation of a water management district "responsive to both local needs and statewide interests...to monitor and manage surface and groundwater in the Lower Big Sur River Basin."

The plan also urges Monterey County to ask the California State Division of Water Rights to "temporarily withhold approval of new applications for appropriative water rights from the Lower Big Sur River Basin and its tributary, creeks and springs and from wells in the river" until a complete study of water extraction on the fishery is completed.

The Little Sur River plan states its primary goal as the protection of "the outstanding natural values of the Little Sur River and its watershed as prime fish and wildlife habitat and for scenic and passive outdoor recreation and to support continued ranching use and those visitor-serving uses and limited resource-dependent uses which are compatible with protection of these natural resources."

One of the more potentially damaging activities planned near the watershed area is mining of limestone on Pico Blanco.

The draft plan recommends that Monterey County require Granite Rock Co., which has mining claims in Pico Blanco, to monitor the health and reproduction of the endangered peregrine falcon and prairie falcon in Pico Blanco.

•

'IN THE EVENT that impacts to these endangered birds are recorded, appropriate limitations on mining activity during the critical period (January-July) should be required," the plan states.

The plan also recommends that Monterey County and the Coastal Commission "carefully consider the potential environmental advantages of a conveyor belt vs. a haul road as a means of transporting mineral products from the Pico Blanco mine, should large scale mining operations be proposed.

"The conveyor belt alternative, if properly designed, should produce less air pollution, reduce energy consumption, result in less erosion and siltation and may have less visual impact than a new or enlarged haul road."

And the Little Sur River plan also urges Monterey County to "emphasize the protection of Pico Blanco and the adjoining ridges as a major scenic landmark on the Big Sur coast" by preventing road work that would "visually disrupt" the portion of the mountain that can be seen from Highway 1.

Also, the plan states that "every effort should be taken by the county and the U.S. Forest Service to minimize the visual impact of mining on Pico Blanco as viewed from the Ventana Wilderness."

The Ventana Wilderness is located east of the mountain in the Los Padres National Forest.

In the Big Sur River plan, water supply from the lower river basin and in several tributary streams is the most topical concern.

The plan points out that water resources development in the lower river basin, where most of the water for residential and resort developments is extracted, has not been tabulated by a "single management agency."

•

IT ALSO STATES that there are "no effective regulations, controls, guidelines, or a policing agency with the responsibility to manage and protect the water resources in the Big Sur coastal study area.

"The potential for additional water usage for both residential and recreational development is uncertain in light of the inadequate information about water availability, present water usage and its effects on the river ecosystem."

As a result, the plan recommends that a water management district be formed for the Lower Big Sur River Basin.

It also urges Monterey County to temporarily withhold approval of new applications for appropriative water rights from the Big Sur River and its tributaries and from nearby wells until more information about water flow and its impact on wildlife is gathered.

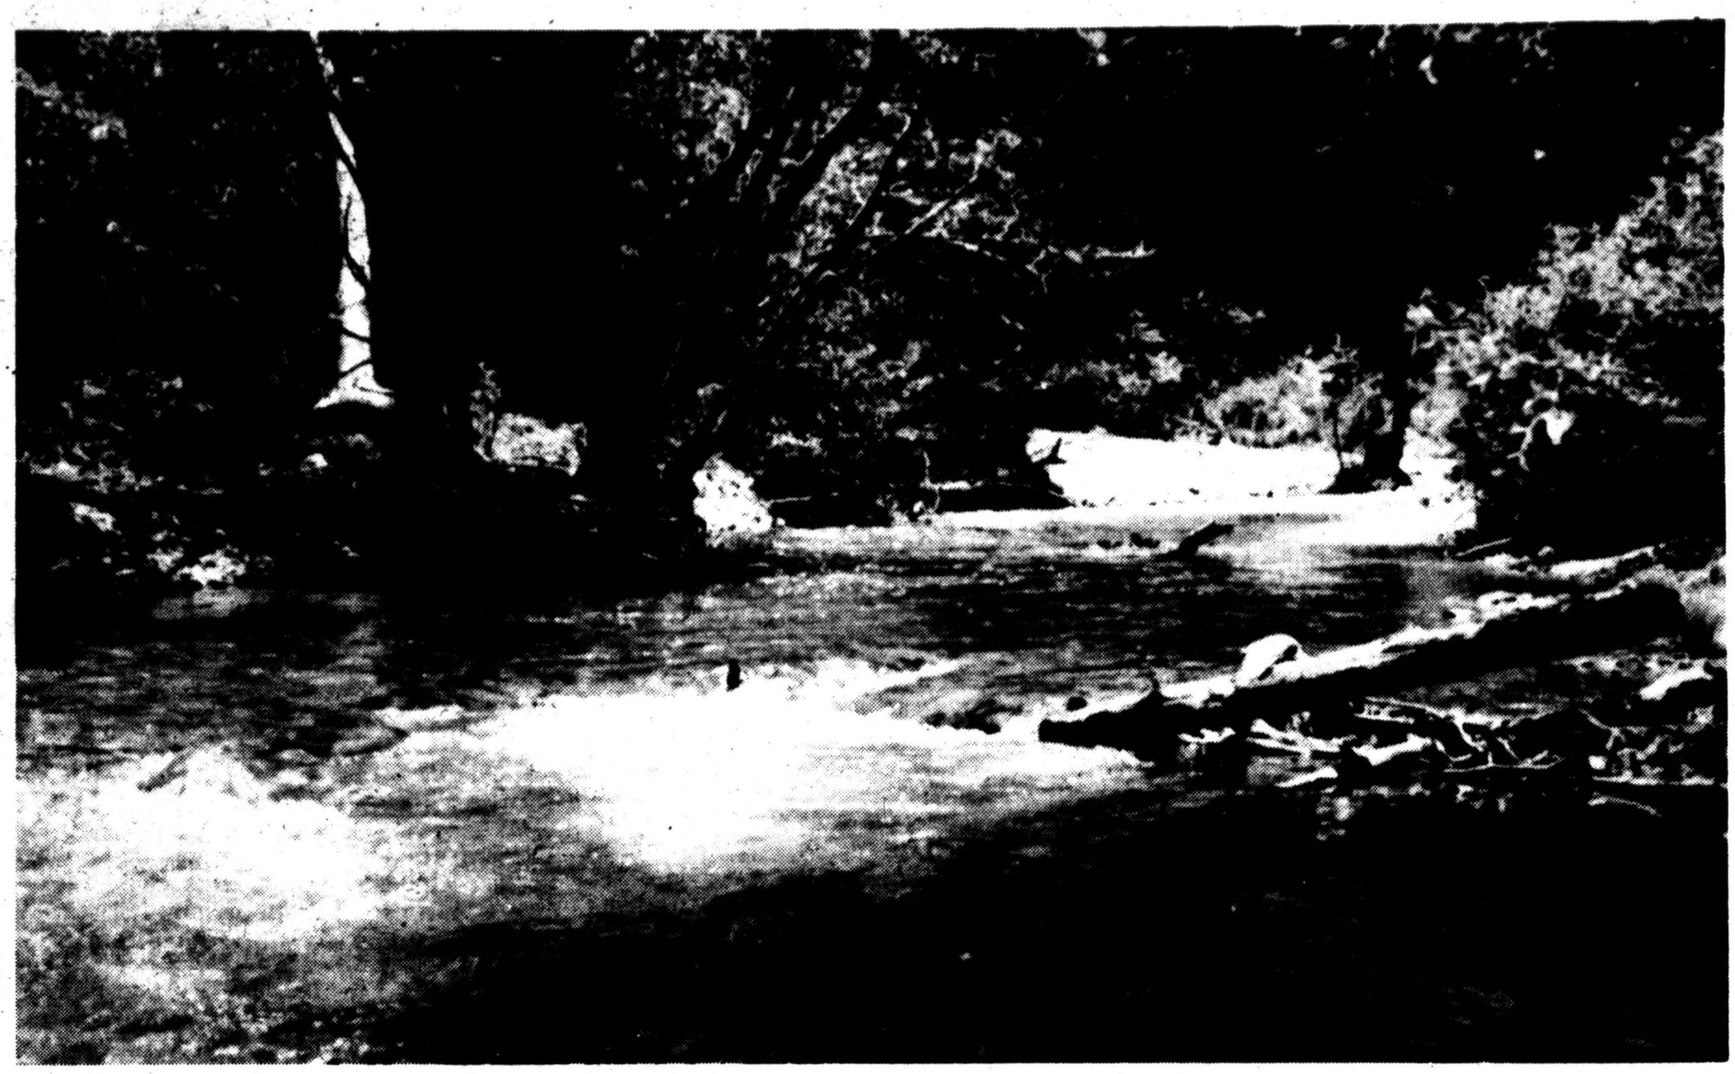
It also asks the California State Division of Water Rights to recognize that wells are drawing water from near the banks of the Lower Big Sur River and it should grant existing well water users a permit for the "current established level of withdrawal of water."

The plan also recommends policies that would enhance the steelhead trout population.

Among its recommendations, it states that the California State Department of Fish and Game should continue its current policy of not stocking the Lower Big Sur River with catchable trout.

"The continued fishing pressure in the summer months may be significantly decreasing the juvenile steelhead trout population which must spend their first summer in the Lower Big Sur River," according to the plan.

"Probably most of the trout caught in the summer months are juvenile steelhead which are almost always mistaken by the novice for rainbow trout."



PLANS THAT WOULD benefit the Big Sur River (above) and the Little Sur River were the subjects of a public hearing at the Monterey County Planning Commission meeting in Salinas June 8. When approved by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors and the Coastal Commission, the river management plans will be incorporated in the Big Sur Land Use Plan.

After-school period may face budget axe

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A PLAN to offer an extra voluntary seventh period at Carmel Middle School is just one program in demand by parents and students which may not be offered because of fiscal constraints in the Carmel Unified School District 1983-84 budget.

The board of education is expected to adopt the tentative budget when it meets at 7:30 p.m. June 14 in the middle school library, Carmel Valley Road about one mile east of Highway 1.

Trustees in the past have indicated a preference for an extra period either before or after the regular six-period day at the middle school.

But severe financial problems have blocked implementation of the approximately $40,000 plan which has been discussed for the last few years. This year is no exception.

'This is a nice add-on, but the key right now is how we can get more quantitative things done in the classroom. The best way to do that is to have a smaller student-teacher ratio.'

If Governor George Deukmejian's proposed state budget passes, trustees would have to chop another $500,000 from the school budget. The board already has trimmed the budget by about $200,000, but hopes a proposed state legislature education reform and financing package will provide enough revenues.

If the additional revenue is provided, trustees are expected to review the extra period concept again this summer.

A new survey of middle school students indicates a demand for the seventh period.

Three out of every five middle school students indicated on their fall registration forms they would take an extra period class if offered after school, according to Principal Frank Lynch.

The usual registration form completed this spring for the fall semester included a survey that asked students whether they would take the class after school and also questioned which courses the students would like to see offered, Lynch explained.

The survey was also completed by current fifth graders who will attend the middle school next fall.

Of the 535 students, 211 indicated they want to take the extra class from 2:35 p.m. to 3:30 p.m., Lynch reported.

Classes requested are: art (57), typing (52), math (50), grammar (36), Latin (35), French (32), short story (27), Spanish (22), band (16), social studies (9) and German (6).

•

ONLY LATIN is not currently offered either as a separate class or as part of another program, Lynch said.

The band class is offered as an "O" period before the regular school day.

Despite the demand, an extra period is not Lynch's top priority for funding.

"My first priority is if more money does turn up, the additional funds should be used to lower the student-teacher ratio," Lynch said.

"This is a nice add-on, but the key right now is how we can get more quantitiative things done in the classroom. The best way to do that is to have a smaller student-teacher ratio."

The current average Carmel Middle School student-teacher ratio is 29-1. There are certain classes with more students while other courses fall well below the average student-teacher ratio, he explained.

District policy states that the superintendent must authorize any class that has an enrollment of fewer than 15, the principal said.

Each extra period class would cost the district approximately $5,000 for teacher salary, fringe benefits and other related costs, Lynch explained.

Since at least 20 students have requested eight separate seventh period classes, the cost would be about $40,000 to the district, he said.

That additional $40,000 could be used to add at least one and one-half teaching positions for the regular program, Lynch pointed out.

Charging a fee to offset the cost of the extra period program is not permissible.

Under state law, a class that is offered for credit must be free. The only charges allowed are for special materials, such as clay in crafts and wood in woodworking, Lynch said.

There is also the question of transportation.

If a seventh period program is offered, Lynch expects students will have to provide their own transportation.

"As of right now we haven't even discussed transportation. As my best guess, I think it is something the families will have to provide," he said.

It would cost the district approximately $50,000 to provide the additional transportation, according to estimates prepared last year.

If additional funds are available, it will be up to trustees to determine whether to offer the seventh period program.

"I don't know what its changes are. It just depends on how high a priority it is with the school board," Lynch said.

TYPING IS one of the classes that many Carmel Middle School students would like to take as part of a seventh period after-school program. Action on a seventh period program is being delayed until the state legislature adopts its own budget. Above are seventh graders Tina Morago and Sam Kleinek.

Trustees are in the same position now as they were when the seventh period concept was presented in early March. At that time, they wanted to wait until the budget picture becomes clearer in Sacramento before they made a final decision.

"I think the entire board favors the seven period day if we can find the money," board president Ken White said in late February.

"I'm not going to do anything with this until the budget picture becomes clearer in Sacramento."

Trustee Harold Santee summed up the board's sentiments: "I think the board is between a rock and a hard spot. We want to provide more educational opportunities, but we don't have the money to pay for it."

Religious views on nuclear war

Peninsula Peacemakers — a group of people from various churches interested in exploring questions of peace and war from a religious viewpoint — has planned three study sessions on the American Catholic bishops' pastoral letter "The Challenge of Peace: God's Promise and Our Response."

The sessions are scheduled for Thursdays June 16, June 23 and June 31, and each will begin at 7:30 p.m. The overall title is "A Look at the Bishops' Pastoral Letter."

At the first session, "An Overview and Discussion," to be held in MacMahon Center at Carmel Mission Basilica, the pastoral letter, recently approved by the country's Roman Catholic bishops in the glare of media attention, will be discussed by Scott Kennedy, founder and staff member of the Resource Center for Non-Violence, Santa Cruz.

Kennedy is also a member of the National Council of the Fellowship of Reconciliation and co-author (with Diane Pike) of "The Wilderness Revolt." The evening will include an opportunity for those present to react.

On Thursday, June 23, at First Presbyterian Church of Monterey, 501 Eldorado, the topic will be "An Inside View: The Struggle to Speak." Molly Fumia of Los Gatos, who was in close dialogue with (Auxiliary) Bishop Thomas Gumbleton of Detroit as he formed his own conscience regarding war and nuclear weapons.

Wallcoverings add color and pattern

In colonial America, wall decoration was simple and to the point. Painted borders and naive stencil designs were applied directly onto walls to add color and pattern to otherwise drab interiors.

Today, thanks to modern technology, the heritage of those colonial interiors can be re-created with easy-to-hang and easy-to-care-for vinyl wallcoverings in hundreds of colors and patterns.

Trying to decide which wallcovering to buy is not easy. You want to make a choice that best reflects your lifestyle and decorating tastes. But where do you begin?

A trip to your local wallcovering store is the first step. You'll find that wallcovering manufacturers have taken much of the mystery out of trying to make difficult decorating decisions.

Wallcovering pattern books are designed to give ideas and inspiration to help decorate every room in the house.

In MayFair's "Kitchen, Bath & Beyond" collection you'll find 82 pages filled with full-color room scenes of kitchens, baths, bedrooms and living areas that show how wallcoverings can give a custom tailored look to any room.

For instance, MayFair suggests using a linen textured stripe below the chair rail in a long hallway to add architectural detail. The same beige and almond color combination is used in a botanical print in the adjoining kitchen/breakfast room. Natural woods and rich terra cotta accents complete the comfortable country feeling.

Space efficiency for 'small' world

Skyhigh mortgages, ever-increasing rents. What's a budget-conscious person to do? As the unfortunate housing industry knows well, most of us are delaying the dream of bigger home or more deluxe apartment for that brighter day in our economic futures.

The present need not mean "making do," however. We can redecorate and improve even in space-limited accommodations. In fact, that's exactly what the National Association of Home Builders reports most U.S. consumers are doing today.

NAHB estimates that close to $50 billion was spent by do-it-yourselfer's and professionals on remodeling in 1982. Americans are just not sacrificing style for space.

If you're one of those economic-minded refurbishers, long on imagination, but short on room, consider including space-saving entertainment centers in your redecorating shemes. Sharp Electronics Corporation of Paramus, N.J., is one company that has designed such centers with your floor space needs in mind.

Consider Sharp's line of 30" wide console TV's with 25" (diagonal) screens. Models 25G100, 25G200 and 25G300, though they vary in special features offered, are all noteworthy for their space saving design.

These models require only 2.9 sq. ft. of floor space while conventional consoles need 5.1 sq. ft. The result: a 43 percent savings in floor space used!

In addition, they all provide an elevated picture tube, which at 38" off the floor is directly at eye-level for more comfortable viewing. A viewer can relax, watch a favorite show, and never have to crane or twist his neck in a downward position.

All units are cable-ready with remote controls, and some feature a swivel base for additional comfort. Their simulated wood-grain cabinets add an attractive air of sophistication to any living or family room.

Redesigners and redecorators, be assured that your entertainment areas are well-equipped in the most space-efficient way possible with innovative, people-oriented Sharp video products. For additional information, contact Sharp Electronics Corporation, 10 Sharp Plaza, PO Box 588, Paramus, NJ 07652.

Family buys restaurant

By FLORENCE MASON

A FAMILY interested in other Carmel families is the new owner of Em Le's restaurant.

If all the legal aspects have turned out favorably, Ken and Marie Crank, former owners of The Picnic Box in Carmel Plaza, will reopen the Dolores Street restaurant June 10, after a week of cleaning and refurbishing.

Both Ken and Marie will work at Em Le's, along with their sons — Rick and Charles — and probably Marie Crank's sister, Edith Wasson, a waitress at La Playa. The family involvement is important in Ken's concept of what Em Le's has been and can be now.

"We wanted this particular restaurant because it has been there a good long time and because it used to be for local residents," Crank said. "We want it to be that way again, for everyday customers, working customers and older people who like to sit and relax with good food. We want to know our customers by name, just as we did in our two and a half years at the Picnic Box."

The Cranks plan to keep a menu similar to that now offered by Em Le's — sandwiches, soup and homemade chili, for example. But there will be a difference.

"We're planning to introduce a variety of sandwiches — for example, an Oriental one. And we'll have many different kinds of bread."

The new owners will offer dinner on Friday and Saturday nights, again with an emphasis on appealing to local residents. The dinners will be home-cooked and limited to one or two entrees, with homelike touches such as hot biscuits, Crank said.

Indefatigable Don Bowen of Carmel Business Sales, a division of Independent Realty Associates, chalked up still another restaurant sale with this one. Is that eight in one year, Don?

WHAT IS THE ADAMS FAMILY UP TO?

Royal Adams told the Carmel Business License and Code Review Board that the Adams family's latest enterprise is "sort of a wierd story, typical of us!"

Or is it just hard for them to let go of business interests, especially when a novel idea is presented? Mrs. Adams said she and her husband Robert "had great hopes of totally retiring."

Then her husband told her that they would have to take back some adjacent rented space. "We'll have to create a new store," he told her. When it turned out that that wasn't so, it was already too late. An irresistible idea had taken over. The Adamses decided to put it into their Fifth Avenue store — the Pot Bellied Stove,

Thus was born "Adams Eve," a new department in the Adamses' "general merchandise" store. It is unique with specialized fashions and accessories, including custom-designed clothes for the handicapped. The clothes are designed by Jan Simmelink, under the name of Enchantments by Jan. They are casual and "tailored to the individual."

The most exciting part, for the Adamses and Jan, is that the latter has spent four years custom designing and tailoring for the handicapped, such as stroke victims, post-mastectomy patients and those with arthritis. She developed aprons that are easy to tie, clothes of all kinds that are easy to get into and out of.

"It's a unique concept," Royal Adams explained. "She works individually and comes up with stylish, comfortable clothes that work well for the customer." Jan will also give private sewing lessons.

The new department is in "the back little corner of the shop." The Adamses plan to distribute flyers about the new service for the handicapped in hospitals and rest homes. There will also be some sales of Jan's clothes off the rack in the shop.

The new department opened last month with an introductory coffee hour. Jan Simmelink, Royal Adams told us, has been in Carmel two years. She is of Pennsylvania Dutch ancestry.

HELGA ROSS came to Carmel via Germany, Montana and Los Angeles and is now the owner of The Jewel Box on the south side of Ocean Avenue between Monte Verde and Lincoln streets.

THE CITY — GETTING TOUGH

The city of Carmel, through its business license and code review board, is concerned about the number of illegal coin-operated machines.

Planning Director Bob Griggs told board members he had just found out about some unlicensed machines. "I don't want to see it become like the Santa Cruz boardwalk," he said.

The problem is one of licensing, a procedure followed in the past but not up-to-date.

"They can be a detriment to the community. Each machine should be individually licensed, or taken out," Griggs said. There is a $100 fee for each license, which must be displayed on the machine, and there are various regulations governing their use. Newest offenders are the electronic games that have proliferated recently.

The Carmel Police Department has enforcement responsibility, Griggs pointed out. The issue last arose in 1981 because of an illegal coin-operated juke box at Sade's Bar on Ocean Avenue. The city ruled the machine illegal as an "instrument" that could be operated by customers. Sade's unplugged the offending box with great ceremony and replaced it with a new music system.

Griggs said it is up to the city administrator to direct enforcement of licensing requirements and other regulations for all types of coin-operated machines.

"The police department did a survey before and we were licensing every one of them," Griggs said. "Now some are slipping in. I'll stay with it. We're just not that type of town."

City Administrator Doug Schmitz met with Police Chief John McGilvray shortly after the meeting to assure followup on enforcement. At the next meeting of the license board he reported that the only violations appear to be those few noted by Planning Director Griggs.

★★★

As an addendum to last week's report on city concern about unlicensed business operations: city officials have some special concern about activities in places where that particular activity is not a permitted use. Building Inspector Ron Warren, at a recent meeting of the Business License and Code Review Board, said:

"Programs like dance exercises and aerobics classes must have a license; they may not know that. Even those operating at Sunset Center are required to obtain a license, as well as groups renting clubrooms and the like within city limits."

City Administrator Schmitz said he will work on the problem with Warren and Carmel City Atty. George Brehmer. "Ron's researching use permits," Schmitz explained. "It's a question of both use permits and licenses."

A SWEETER SUBJECT

"I'm a chocolate lover, like many people," Michael Lajigian said. But unlike most people, Lajigian has taken his love of chocolate to the extent of opening a chocolate shop. "Chocolate Dreams" replaces Dock Lor's Canton restaurant on Ocean Avenue between Mission and San Carlos streets.

Lajigian, who has been a homeowner in Carmel since 1966, moved to the area permanently when he built his own home here in 1976. With many years of experience in the life insurance field, he has cut down to part-time in that vocation. His general partner in Chocolate Dreams is David Hagerman, who lives in San Francisco.

Both partners appreciate the quality of chocolate found in San Francisco, such as Ghiradelli's and Blum's. "We weren't able to find that fine quality here," Lajigian said. "This is our opportunity to offer a good quality of chocolates, both domestic and foreign."

The imported chocolates will be coming from Germany, Switzerland, Italy and the Netherlands. Some will be boxed; other varieties will be loose on trays in the showcases.

Carmel Business License and Code Review Board member Glenn Crawford asked Lajigian if the chocolates would be "dripless." The new shop owner understood immediately and replied that they would, "so they won't drip onto Carmel sidewalks."

The store's name came about while Lajigian talked to Carmelites about his plans and one said: "I dream about chocolates!"

Lajigian's wife Jeannie will help him with the shop. Other than life insurance and chocolates, his main interest is watching football — especially when the '49ers play. It's an interest that goes back to 1957. He also described himself as a "vociferous" reader.

PAUL JOHNSON of Carmel is the lucky winner of an Olympic pin set, which was the prize in a drawing at First Interstate Bank. The sets are also on sale at the bank on the northwest corner of Lincoln and Monte Verde street for $200, of which $90 goes to the Olympic Committee. Above, Johnson received his pin set from bank manager Judy Brooke.

Hagerman is a business administration graduate of the University of California. Immediately after graduation, he started a career in retail sales. He lives in San Francisco and became public relations director for Pier 39 when it opened in 1978. The partners also have a store on Pier 39 — Hollywood USA — which specializes in Hollywood memorabilia. "That's exciting, too," said one of Carmel's newest entrepreneurs.

IT'S HELGA'S JEWEL BOX NOW

Helga Ross came to Carmel from Germany, via Los Angeles and Montana. While she visited Carmel she "fell in love with the community." Quite by accident, she saw an advertisement for the sale of a jewelry store. Now she is the new owner of The Jewel Box (Ocean Avenue between Lincoln and Monte Verde streets).

Mrs. Ross, whose husband Siegfried is in the lumber business, had been a housewife and raised the couple's two children (Andreas, eight, and Angela, 13). She became a businesswoman to supplement her husband's work and is "real excited about it."

She doesn't plan any changes in the small, attractive shop formerly owned by the Ponders. Juanita Ponder, who accompanied Mrs. Ross to the business license and board meeting, said she and her husband want to travel and enjoy retirement.

The Rosses appreciate what the area offers in outdoor activity, especially hiking, camping and ocean swimming. "We'll have to find a safe spot for swimming," Helga said, and cited a family preference for oceans or lakes over swimming pools.

A NEW SERVICE AT THE COIN WASH

"A marvelous service," was the word about a new phase of Carmel Coin Wash's operation, spoken by Carmel Planning Commission Chairwoman Sandy Swain as a member of the business license and code review board.

Her reference was to John and Eileen King's plan to add a linen rental service to their coin-operated laundry on Junipero between Third and Fourth avenues.

Eileen King told the business license board they now have linen table cloths and napkins available for a variety of occasions — parties, banquets, weddings and wine tastings, for example.

Customers will come to the laundry to pick up what they need. Afterward, they will return the linen to the same location, where the items will be washed and made ready for the next use. Some of the linen will be stored at the laundry and some at the Kings' home, Eileen King added.

She said that if the business "takes off," they might look for additional space for the whole operation.

The idea came to the Kings because a number of their customers spoke of their need for such a service. Who was their first customer? Their own daughter — for her wedding on May 7!

NOW YOU CAN DINE AT THE SUMMERHOUSE

Last January, Heidi Miguel decided to open her Summerhouse restaurant in Carmel Valley Village for dinner as well as for the customary breakfast, lunch and Sunday brunch. It took time for her to get organized for the change. And then came the slide that closed Carmel Valley Road, except for limited access at certain hours.

Heidi made a decision to go ahead with the change anyway. "Local people are glad to have a place on this side of the slide," she said. So it is working out well for her and for her customers.

The Summerhouse is now open for dinner Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings. Once good weather makes its appearance, and when lighting has been installed, there will be outdoor service.

Dinner will feature homemade items, just as the other menus do, Heidi said. Every weekend, there are two special entrees — one "an American country item" and one a European country item. These will change each weekend. There will also be a regular menu of steak, chicken and fish dishes. Heidi also offers a vegetarian item — homemade fettucini. Desserts come right out of her kitchen also, as even the ice cream is homemade.

Mrs. Miguel, a widow, lives in Carmel Valley. Her two stepchildren are grown and "on their own." Her hobby, she said, really is cooking: "Cooking is my passion; the restaurant is my life."

NAMES AND NOTES

Twenty years with one company is enough, Dan Douglas believes, so he has switched allegiance and is now the head mechanic at Rio Road Arco. Before that, he was at the Standard station in the same area for 10 years, and before that he was at the Standard station in Carmel, where Dick Bruhn's store is now.

Dan, who works on both foreign and domestic cars, lives in Pacific Grove. His wife, Penny Jane, works at the Pine Inn. The couple has a son, Ryan Dean, who is five years old. Dan describes himself as "a diehard duck hunter" who also likes skeet and trap shooting.

It's exciting to see the new Chateau Julien Winery take shape about five miles east of Highway 1 on Carmel Valley Road. Great American Wineries plans to open the new winery in November. A special barrel tasting is scheduled this month.

In the meantime, Ronald Barnes of Pebble Beach has been appointed marketing manager of the company. Dr. Barnes spent several years as director of marketing for CTB/McGraw-Hill and more recently served as marketing and business manager for D.J.H. Architects of Monterey.

★★★

Anne Sosna of Philip Sosna Jewelers (on San Carlos between Fifth and Sixth avenues) has been named a certified gemologist by the American Gem Society. This is the highest professional certification in her field.

★★★

Therese Donath has been named manager of the group travel division of Bob McGinnis Travel in the Carmel Rancho shopping center. She was previously director of the University For Man and QUEST program at Monterey Peninsula College.

One casualty of the winter storms has recovered. The swimming pool at the Carmel Valley Inn has reopened after it was damaged by mud at the end of February. Not storm-related but also exciting for the inn is that renovations of the lobby and Fox Hill restaurant have been completed.

A VOICE FROM THE BIG CITY

Amid all the complaints about what Carmel has become, there comes a voice from San Francisco which says: "It's probably a better place to live."

Stanton Delaplane, writing in the San Francisco Chronicle May 23, said of his visit to our village:

"Is it better to be big? When I was growing up in Carmel, all California had less than 4 million people. I suppose Carmel had a couple of thousand. On the good side, the town now has a clutch of excellent restaurants. The piney streets are loaded with good shops. There are plenty of places to stay — and they've kept them low-rise, thank heavens.

"It's probably a better place to live."

Smokers relent at heart event

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

No matter what the function, there are always a few smokers who can't resist the urge to light up — especially after dinner.

Well, the impossible happened last Thursday evening when the Central Mission Trails Chapter of the American Heart Association had its 19th annual meeting at La Playa Hotel in Carmel.

During the three hour event, including the cocktail hour, dinner, presentations of award and guest speakers, not one person lit a cigarette. I'll admit that a few people exited the room a few times but we can only guess as to their reasons.

Being a smoker myself, I have to say that it was nice to eat a meal without spending a portion of my time trying to breathe through a haze of smoke.

The dining room was beautifully decorated in a heart theme with white tablecloths with red napkins, red and white floral arrangements on each table and large red heart-shaped balloons anchored to and floating about each table. The head table was lovely with candlelight and masses of red and white carnations.

Dr. Anthony Sforza, president of the Central Mission Trails Chapter of the AHA, welcomed everyone and gave the president's report. James L. Novotny gave a report of the nominating committee and also presented the numerous awards.

James was totally surprised when the tables turned and he was presented with the Jack Nielsen Distinguished Service Award.

Actress Kim Novak was presented with a beautiful plaque for her participation in the "Dance For Heart" benefit held a few months ago. Kim, who teaches an aerobics class at Sunset Center, thanked everyone and said: "I'll have this beautiful plaque long after I stop dancing."

Guest speakers were Nancy Houston Miller, R.N., and Kathleen Berra, B.S.N. who spoke on "Cardiac Rehabilitation: New Concepts."

Officers for the organization are: Anne McGowan, chairman of the board; Anthony Sforza, M.D. president; Margaret Butterfield, R.N., vice-president; Philip Scofield, vice-president; James Telfer, M.D., vice-president and Marshall Wix, secretary/treasurer.

For dinner guests had their choice of Neptune's Platter or Chicken Forestiere with rice pilaf, fresh vegetables, hearts of romaine salad, peach melba and coffee.

Established locally in 1951, the Monterey branch has been granted non-profit organization status. Dedicated to the advancement of the standards of the music teaching profession, the Monterey Branch sponsors workshops, recitals and scholarship auditions for Monterey County music students.

FREDERICK SKEETOP STANLEY III BORN

Almost every little boy at one time or another wants to grow up and become a fireman. One youngster who will get his chance to do just that is Frederick Skeetop Stanley III.

Baby Stanley is the first child for Skee Stanley, fire chief of the Carmel Highlands Fire Department and his wife Sienna, and because he bears the name of his father and his grandfather he has lovingly been nicknamed "Three."

Three was born at Community Hospital at 9:20 a.m. on May 25. He weighed six pounds, 10 ounces and was 19 inches long at birth. His black hair has now turned a dark blond and he has big blue eyes.

Three's proud grandparents are Frederick and Pauline Stanley of Carmel Meadows and Mrs. Janene Sclawy of Carmel Valley.

The newcomer was born via natural childbirth so father Skee was present to participate in the birth. He's also doing his share of floor-walking and diaper changing.

Three is the seventh grandchild and only grandson for Fred and Pauline. Their son, Doug Chappell and his wife, Kristine, of Spokane, Wash., have five daughters and are expecting another child. Their daughter, Robin Mathewson, and her little daughter, Lauren Amy, live in Carmel Valley.

On Memorial Day, Grandma Pauline gave a party for grandmothers only and Three was there to sleep through all the celebrations with champagne and a cake decorated with the words "SSS Three."

Bets are on that Three already has a toy fire engine!

Water reclamation grant decision in two weeks

By JOE LIVERNOIS

BICKERING SISTER sewage agencies in Carmel and Pebble Beach returned from Washington D.C. June 7 with an assurance from the Environmental Protection Agency that a decision on a final review of the proposed Carmel water reclamation project will be made in two weeks.

Rep. Leon Panetta was the host and arbiter for representatives of the Carmel Sanitary District, the Pebble Beach Community Services District, the EPA and the California State Water Resources Control Board June 6.

At issue was the review process for the final phase of a $12 million grant from the EPA for a proposed wastewater reclamation project that would treat and send wastewater to area golf courses for irrigation.

The EPA has held up a decision on whether to review the Carmel grant application for six months and the Carmel delegation went to Washington D.C. to "break up the logjam," according to Carmel mayor and sanitary district director Charlotte Townsend.

But the Pebble Beach entourage told Panetta and the EPA they opposed the reclamation project.

None of the Pebble Beach directors who met with the EPA officials was available for comment after the meeting.

But Michael Zambory, manager of the Carmel Sanitary District, said in a telephone interview with the Pine Cone/Outlook Monday afternoon that Rebecca Hamner, acting assistant EPA adminstrator for water, pledged that the EPA "will give us an answer in two weeks."

He said that Panetta was particularly "helpful" in directing Hamner to work directly with Clint Whitney of the State Water Resources Control Board to determine whether EPA should review the cost-effectiveness of the project.

Zambory said he was told by the EPA officials that EPA has been mandated by Congress to make a final review of all advanced wastewater treatment projects, such as the proposed reclamation project.

But waivers of the final review can be granted and the Carmel district has asked for the waiver because it would delay the project at least another six months.

Zambory said he got a "muddled impression" from the EPA officials about the review process, especially with the exchange of data between the state water resources control board and the EPA.

•

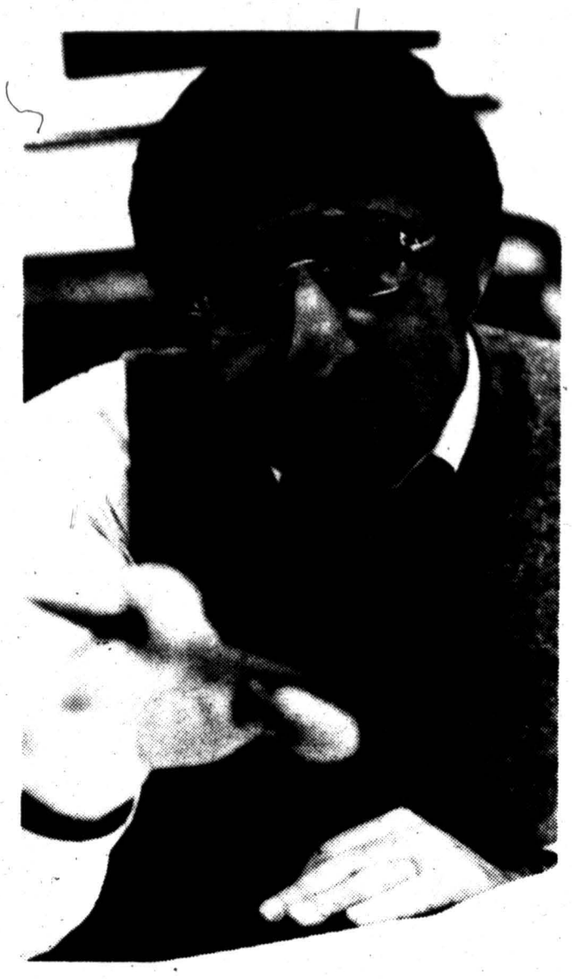
'THERE SEEMS TO have been a lack of communication between the EPA and the state," Mayor Townsend said.

"We told the EPA they should be very careful not to throw seven years out the window," Zambory said.

Seven years ago, the State Water Quality Control Board ordered the Carmel Sanitary District to stop pumping treated sewage into Carmel Bay during certain months of the year. The water quality control board drew a line across the perimeter of the bay as the boundary of the so-called "area of biological significance (ASBS)."

The reclamation project was the Carmel Sanitary District directors' solution. It proposes to highly treat sewage and to sell it for golf course irrigation as an alternative to ocean discharge.

But the Pebble Beach district, a separate entity that purchases one-third the wastewater capacity — and shares one-third the facility and operating costs — of the Carmel Sanitary District, has opposed the reclamation project.



REP. LEON PANETTA of Carmel Valley was host to representatives from Carmel and Pebble Beach sanitary districts, as well as Environmental Protection Agency officials, June 6 in his Washington D.C. office. The visit from Carmel officials was an attempt to force a quick decision from the EPA on a $12 million grant for its proposed wastewater reclamation project. Pebble Beach officials urged the EPA to turn down the grant.

John Strong, chairman of the Pebble Beach Community Services District, said last week he would present a new independent study the Pebble Beach board commissioned that indicated the area of biological significance boundary is "arbitrary."

He said he would also argue that the reclamation project would not be cost-effective.

But Mayor Townsend and Zambory said the ASBS designation was the decision of the state water board and not within the jurisdiction of the EPA. Whether or not the EPA funds the reclamation project, the Carmel district must still stop dumping sewage into the bay by July 1, 1990.

In fact, the ASBS was not a topic of much conversation among the EPA and Carmel officials in Washington Monday, Mayor Townsend said.

"We told them we were here because we were desperate," she said. "I was irate. I told them we shouldn't have to be here. We followed all the rules over the years and did everything we were supposed to do. We were a small agency being whipsawed between two other agencies."

"Charlotte and I both feel like we've been through the mill here," Zambory said.

Both the regional office of the EPA in San Francisco and the state water resources control board staff have recommended that the waiver be granted.

But Panetta told the Pine Cone/Outlook after the meetings that the EPA "must be awfully careful" about waivers, because "57 zones have been designated areas of special biological significance" and a waiver in Carmel "could set a precedent for the others."

•

PANETTA SAID THE Pebble Beach position is a "risky approach, obviously.

"One of the concerns I have is the cost-effectiveness to the people in the area. If the EPA decides not to proceed with the grant and the state retains its ASBS designation, the state board could still require the district to proceed with the wastewater project and the people in the district would have to bear the cost.

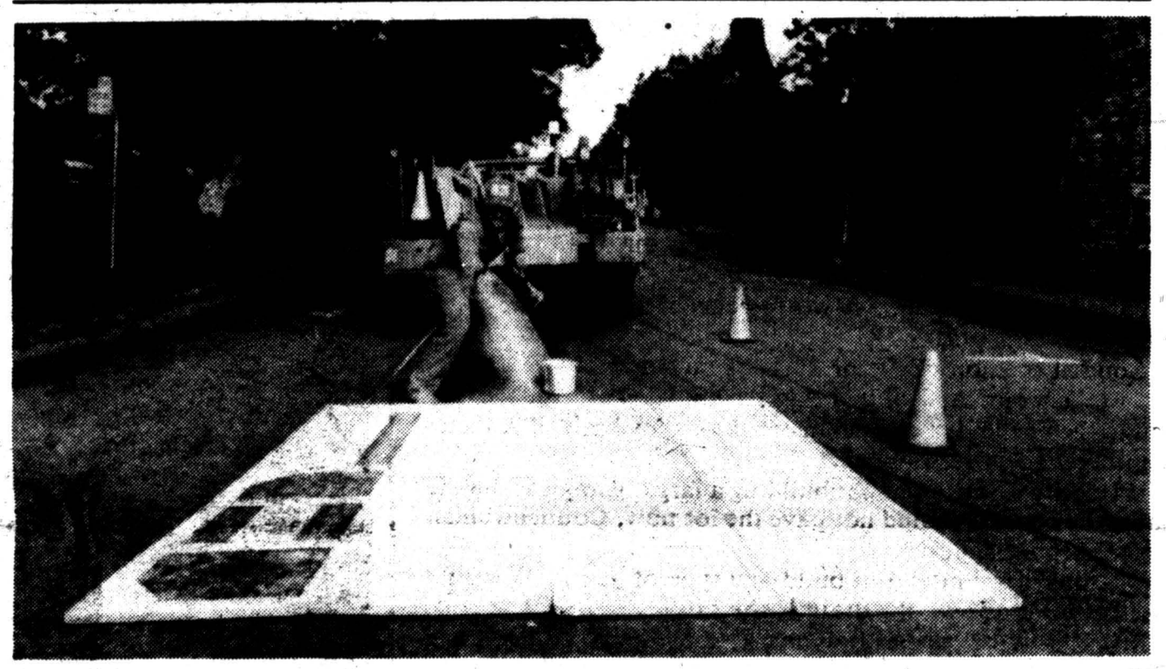
"This thing could really blow up on the people in the area."

He also said reclamation "makes sense to me" as a way to conserve water on the Monterey Peninsula.

Panetta said the EPA has balked at making a decision on the Carmel grant review for six months for two reasons.

"Part of it, frankly, was the chaos at the EPA," he said. "The reverberations throughout the EPA were incredible, as you can imagine when people are hired and fired with a great deal of regularity."

That, combined with "the inherent red tape involved in projects of this nature, tends to slow things down," Panetta said.



The secret's out

HAVE YOU ever wondered how city crews are able to draw those nice neat signs on the streets telling you to stop? Well, the mystery was recently solved when the Pine Cone/Outlook captured Ron Prieto at work at the intersection of Mission Street and Junipero Avenue. Stencils create the perfect look. Add some white paint, allow to dry and the sign is there. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Council weighs paved parking lot at Sunset

'THE PIT' may no longer live up to its nickname.

The Carmel City Council tentatively is to discuss a proposal to pave and line the north field at Sunset Center for parking when it meets in a special budget study session at 7:30 p.m. June 14 at city hall.

Sometimes referred to as "the pit" because of its bumpy dirt surface and uncontrolled parking, vehicular parking on the field is currently free with no time restrictions. Depending on how orderly the cars are parked, there are between 150 to 250 spaces available.

However, "the pit" should undergo a facelift, according to Councilman David Maradei.

The city should pave and line the lot to obtain the maximum number of parking spaces. In addition, a fee should be charged to park there, Maradei proposed during a June 9 joint session with the planning commission.

Details of the plan are sketchy so far. Maradei said he does not have information on the cost of the proposal — how many parking spaces the lot would provide, what kinds of time limits to impose and what fees should be charged.

Maradei's proposal is the result of an original concept by Councilman Frank Lloyd to charge a fee for parking in the lot. The fee would generate additional funds for city coffers."

The paving project will serve as a "trial balloon" on whether there is a demand for a major parking facilty at the site.

"Once we establish if the lot is going to be used and if it has the potential to solve some of the parking problem in the residential areas, then the logical step would be to see if even more additional spaces could alleviate the parking problem in the residential zone," Maradei told the Pine Cone/Outlook June 7.

"This is a better way to go rather than going out there and building a huge parking lot and finding out that it doesn't serve the community," he continued. "The council is cognizant of not creating new problems and making wise and intelligent expenditures."

Council opinion of the proposal is mixed.

"I take a dim view of it. I don't think we need to pave it to gauge the demand," Councilman Frank Lloyd said. "A meter would give us a reading on it."

If the city is serious about building a larger garage at the site later, the council should not pave the lot now, Councilwoman Helen Arnold believes.

"I think if we intend to build any type of garage, it would just be money down the drain," she said.

Mrs. Arnold supports building a parking garage at Sunset Center.

"Yes, I'd like to see a a garage there as long as it is level with San Carlos (Street) and has a park on top," she said. "My main interest is to alleviate the parking problem in the residential area around there."

Councilman Robert Stephenson agrees with Maradei: "We could build a big expensive thing and then find out nobody will park there — like in Monterey."

Mayor Charlotte Townsend was out of town and unavailable for comment.

From the Heart
by Cliff Brannick

Each time the driver steps on the gas pedal of his fuel injected car, he triggers a new series of computer calculations. The pedal open a valve, comparable to the carburetor's choke, that increases the volume of air entering the engine's intake manifold. The computer instantly reacts to the increased air flow adjusting the engine speed and power required, as well as the temperatures of both the engine and the incoming air. It then calculates the proper fuel mixture and directs a spray of gasoline into each cylinder.

A very important consideration to automobile safety is proper repairs as needed, and regular maintenance. At MONTEREY DATSUN-SUBARU, you will find only top-notch, knowledgeable mechanics working on your car. For quality auto repair and maintenance, we are you headquarters. Father Farrell's wisdom

Bless our tortillas

CARMEL ROTARY CLUB, LA PLAYA HOTEL

Oh Almighty and Eternal God, on this eve of the 213th birthday of Monterey, we humbly ask Thee not only to provide but to bless our frijoles, tortillas and vino rubio as you bless us all to Thy service above self.

Early this morning I took down from its place of honor, John Steinbeck's Tortilla Flat. I was born just three blocks east of the Flat that is not flat, and I knew its characters and they and many others were neighbors, friends, classmates and companions. I feel sure that most of them have already begun the Monterey Birthday Party, Merienda in heaven's heights.

Grasping the holy hand of Padre Junipero Serra, the strong arm of Gaspar de Portola and the gray robe of Padra Juan Crespi, they will be surrounded by their ancestors, Indians, Spaniards, Mexicans and Hueros.

O Dios Poderoso, in these 213 years, You have continued to bless this pine-covered peninsula, but most of all you have blessed its inhabitants, like the paisanos of Tortilla Flat, who have been by and large, able to rise above greed and selfishness to embrace a friend and a stranger in kindness.

In the olden days when we said, "Comos estas?" El Viejo replied, "Como los pobres." Like the poor — poor, but contented. The happiness of the paisano is not a fable nor is it a myth.

Pilon (pilon is something thrown in when a trade is made — a boot) tells us that its virtue has been enshrined in history to keep sneers from the lips of sour scholars. It is the secret of gracious sharing. Happy Birthday, Monterey! Hey, Pilon, pass the jug of vino! Amen.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

A survey conducted last year found that more than thirty of the world's leaders were over the age of 70. The eldest elder statesman was Alessandro Pertini, president of Italy, at 86, followed by Ayatollah Khomeini of Iran, 81. At 71 President Reagan was one of the "youngsters" among this group.

★ ★ ★

Not long ago marriages among older people were relatively rare, but that's not true anymore. During 1982 more than 50,000 Americans entered into marriages wherein at least one of the partners was 65 years of age or older. And the future promises to see more such golden-age weddings taking place: by the year 2025 every sixth person in the country will be 65 or older.

Carmel will sue over Odello plans

Coastal Commission approval of a large residential and commercial development on the eastern side of the Odello property violates the state Coastal Act, the Carmel City Council claims in a lawsuit against the state of California and Monterey County to be filed this week in Monterey County Superior Court.

The city council voted to file the lawsuit in a closed session June 7 after a long meeting in which the council also adopted a moratorium on second story homes and discussed a fireworks ban from Carmel Beach on the Fourth of July.

The lawsuit claims the 1972 Coastal Act initiative and subsequent legislation require that prime agricultural land in the coastal zone be protected from development.

When the Coastal Commission certified the Carmel Area Local Coastal Program April 14, it allowed the Odello family to build a 162-unit subdivision, a restaurant, a farmer's market and a recreational facility on 54 of the 134 acres Odello East property, on Highway 1 about one mile south of Rio Road.

The lawsuit asks the court to overturn the Coastal Commission approval. The lawsuit was still being prepared by press deadline and specific complaints were unavailable.

News of the lawsuit came as no surprise to property owner Bruna Odello.

"It's not fair," Mrs. Odello told the Pine Cone/-Outlook June 8. "It's not honest. I can't believe they can be that discriminatory. It's almost reached the point that its persecution."

She said that while the suit will be filed against the Coastal Commission and the county, "I'm the target."

She maintains that while building has continued on prime agricultural property throughout Carmel Valley, Carmel has only focused on the Odello property. "All this other building has gone on, but we are the scapegoats," she said.

"How can they go ahead with a lawsuit against us when their budget is hurting? They have enough trouble in their own confines. This is going to cost the city a lot of money."

The lawsuit was approved on a 3-0 vote with Mayor Charlotte Townsend abstaining and Councilman Frank Lloyd absent.

In other matters, the council unanimously enacted an emergency ban on residential second stories. The 45-day moratorium applies to all new buildings, second story additions to one-story homes and additions to current second story floor space.

The ban will be discussed by the Carmel Planning Commission when it meets at 4 p.m. June 15 at city hall.

The moratorium was requested by Councilman David Maradei, who fears that the proliferation of second story buildings is "changing" the residential zone.

The council agreed and set a public hearing on the problem for 7:30 p.m. July 19.

In other major action, the council postponed consideration of a ban on fireworks and fires on Carmel Beach until all members could be present. The ban will be reviewed again during a special session at 4 p.m. June 14.

The council did, however, unanimously vote to install a four-foot wire mesh fence along the beach to protect the banks from further erosion caused by visitors seeking shortcuts to the beach or playing on the banks.

The fence will cost the city about $5,250. A previous proposal to rent a six-foot, $3,500 cyclone fence was scrapped.

In other matters, the council will soon face the question of funding for the proposed $1 million Harrison Memorial Library annex.

The council is unsure whether it wants to commit city funds to pay for the general operations of the annex.

Library board President Francis Herrick, in a letter to the council, has asked the council to pay for staffing of the annex at a cost of between $40,000 to $50,000 annually.

The request is expected to be studied as part of a special council budget study session at 7:30 p.m. June 14.

The council faces its own budgetary problems and apparently does not want to be saddled with the extra burden of financing the general operations of the annex, proposed for the northwest corner of Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue.

The Harrison Memorial Library Board of Trustees has enough money in a special endowment fund to pay for the annex construction. However, trustees are still uncertain where the operations funds will come from.

The library board should not expect the city council to ante up the extra $50,000 a year, says Councilman David Maradei.

"It is not certain that the library (annex) is going to be built. It comes down to a matter of dollars," Maradei told the Pine Cone/Outlook June 6.

Councilman Frank Lloyd says it's time to construct the annex.

"As I see it, we have to build the annex now no matter what. The city can can scrape the money up somewhere," Lloyd said.

"The library is the oldest cultural activity and even preludes organization of the city. It deserves all of the support we can possibley dig up anywhere."

Mayor Charlotte Townsend supports the annex construction, but tempers her remarks by saying that she wants to see "other options" for financing general operations of the addition.

"I personally want to see the annex built. I'd hate to see this stop it, but we need to look at the options," she said.

The mayor added that she plans to meet individually with library trustees to further explore the funding alternatives.

Council members Helen Arnold and Robert Stephenson are non-committal on the issue.

Peters may face new trial

"THE PEOPLE" were not adequately represented in their civil case against Fifth District Supervisor William Peters, a California appellate court ruled late last week.

The First District Court of Appeal in San Francisco agreed, in a 3-0 opinion, with Monterey County Dist. Atty. William Curtis that a visiting superior court judge should not have excluded a district attorney investigator from the lengthy civil trial against Peters in 1981.

As a result, the appellate court ordered a retrial in the district attorney's attempt to enforce the financial disclosure and reporting requirements of the state Political Reform Act and the Monterey County Conflict of Interest Code.

San Luis Obispo County Superior Court Judge William Fredman ruled against Curtis, who alleged Peters failed fully and accurately to report certain economic interests and investments in his financial disclosure statements while he was a Monterey County Planning Commissioner from 1977 to 1980.

But at the outset of the trial, Fredman also ruled that Richard Hack, the district attorney investigator, should not assist Deputy Dist. Atty. Terry Spitz in the presentation of the case.

Peters' attorney, Harry Delizonna of San Jose, objected to Hack's presence because he contended Hack was a potential witness and the rationale that permits a "designated officer" to be present in a criminal trial does not apply in a civil prosecution.

Curtis appealed the civil case because of the exclusion of Hack.

"We conclude that the People of the State of California as a party to the action were entitled to the presence of the investigating officer designated by its attorney, the civil prosecutor," wrote Appellate Justice P.J. Racanelli in the 10-page opinion released June 8.

Surf's up at Carmel Beach Saturday

THE FOURTH annual Sunshine Freestyle Ocean Pacific Surfabout is scheduled to begin at 6:30 a.m. Saturday, June 11 at Carmel beach and will continue through Sunday, June 12.

The event resembles the Australian style beach contest which is more than a surfing contest, according to the organizer of the event, Bradley Johnson of Carmel.

"It could better be called a beach festival with a variety of events for all types of beachgoers," he said.

Junior surfing begins the schedule of events on Saturday, followed by men's surfing at 7:15 a.m. and masters' surfing at 9:45 a.m. Boys' surfing will begin at 11:30 a.m. with finals scheduled for 12 noon.

At 12:30 p.m. there will be a junior boogie board contest and at 1:30 p.m. the senior boogie board contest begins.

The boogie board event pits surfers against one another on soft belly boards called boogie boards. Other events included are "open surfing," which is broken down into five age groups for surfers 12 years old and older. There will be a distance paddling race from the Carmel River State Beach around Carmel Point to the judges' stand on Carmel Beach. It has been won by Marc Cross of Carmel for three years in a row.

There will also be a longboard surfing event which features surfers on traditional style longboards of the past. Headstands, spinners and "hanging 10" are all a part of this stylish event, which is one of the better spectator events of the contest.

At 2:30 p.m. the distance paddling race is scheduled to begin. It involves running, paddling and surfing. Each team consists of four members and each team member must run down the beach, paddle out around a buoy floating beyond the waves, paddle or surf back in and then run up the beach to the next group where the surfboard is handed off to the next team member. The first one to the finish line wins.

At 3:30 p.m. the Sunshine Freestyle O.P. semi-finals bikini contest will get underway — the first time this event has been part of the Surfabout. The contest is open to all Monterey County residents 15 years of age and older.

THE OPEN longboard event will begin at 4:30 p.m. followed by the grand masters, the men's quarter finals and the masters' quarter finals.

At 6:30 a.m. Sunday, June 12, open kneeboard events will begin for surfers who prefer to ride a smaller surfboard on their knees, with the finals scheduled for 7:45 a.m.

At 8 a.m. the junior boogie board event will begin with the finals scheduled for 8:30 a.m. followed by the senior boogie board semi-finals and finals.

At 9:30 a.m. the women's surfing is scheduled to begin. "The women's entry field has been growing with each year and should be a fun event to watch this year," Johnson said.

At 10:30 a.m. the longboard quarter finals and semi-finals will begin, followed by team paddling relays at 12 noon. At 12:45 p.m. there will be a sailboard race and demonstration followed by the bikini finals at 2 p.m.

The winner of the bikini contest will win a trip for two to Hawaii for five days and four nights, compliments of KWST and KIDD radios. The winner will also automatically be entered in the semi-finals of the Miss O.P. Pro scheduled for September in Huntington Beach.

At 3 p.m. the skimboard contest is scheduled to begin. "The skimboard event is always a crowd pleaser with skimboarders skimming along the beach doing 360s, flips and a wide range of other tricks," Johnson added.

At 4:30 p.m. the longboard finals are scheduled to begin followed by the juniors' surfing semi-finals and finals with the men's semi-finals scheduled to begin at 6 p.m. Following the men's finals will be the masters' semi finals scheduled at 7:30 p.m. and the finals scheduled at 8 p.m.

Out of all these events will emerge the grand prize winner — the "Best All-Around Waterman." This is the surfer who accumulates the most points throughout the different events of the contest. The grand prize is a round trip for two for five days and four nights in Hawaii.

"With a prize like this at the end of the rainbow, there will certainly be some tough competition," Johnson predicted.

Despite the fact that some type of surfing competition is held almost monthly in Santa Cruz, there has really never been a locally-organized surfing event for surfers on the Monterey Peninsula, Johnson said.

For more information on the surfabout, phone 375-5015.

Film review:

Another blockbuster from George Lucas

By LISA JENSEN

Return of the Jedi.* With Mark Hamill, Carrie Fisher and Harrison Ford. Written by Lawrence Kasdan and George Lucas. Directed by Richard Marquard. A 20th Century-Fox release. Rated PG.

THE RELEASE of a new chapter of George Lucas' mega-hit Star Wars series is by now not so much the debut of a movie as a national media event.

Since the popular and critical success of the first sequal — The Empire Strikes Back — proved that the phenomenon of the original film was no fluke, anticipation for the final chapter of the proposed trilogy has run sky-high.

Return of the Jedi has finally opened up in neighborhood theaters around the country. Can it possibly be worth all the hype? Of course not. But then, what could be? After all, this isn't a cure for cancer or the second coming. Like its predecessors, it's only a movie.

But what a movie Return of the Jedi is! If the question is whether it lives up to the expectations of Lucas' legion of fans, the answer is a resounding "yes." As thrilling as the most aggressive crash-and-burn action epic, as disarmingly playful as a nursery rhyme and "curiouser" than Alice's adventures in Wonderland, Jedi shows off Lucas' simple genius for updating and retooling the most enduring myths from our shared collective unconscious. Cleverly, unabashedly commercial, it still taps into that childlike sense of wonder buried deep somewhere within us all.

Lucas has always maintained that the resolution to the Star Wars legend would be much simpler than his second-guessers ever imagined. And Jedi offers a remarkably straightforward wrap-up of the trilogy's twin mythological themes, the battle against evil and the hero's quest to discover his true nature and fulfill his destiny.

The film begins with the evil Empire building another Death Star war machine under the personal supervision of the Emperor (Ian McDiarmid) and his villainous henchman, Darth Vader (David Prowse, with James Earl Jones once again supplying the deep, rich, ominous voice).

The rebels make plans to destroy the Death Star before it is completed. But first, Luke Skywalker (Mark Hamill), Leia (Carrie Fisher), Lando Calrissian (Billy Dee Williams), Chewbacca, the Wookie (Peter Mayhew) and trusty droids C-3PO (Anthony Daniels) and R2-D2 have unfinished business back on the desert planet of Tatooine.

Frozen in a block of carbonite at the end of Empire, Han Solo (Harrison Ford) has been returned to his old nemesis, the gangster Jabba the Hutt, an enormous, slimey slug-shaped creature with appallingly decadent appetites and a huge gash of a mouth that reaches halfway across his fat Humpty Dumpty face.

After they spring Han from the deep freeze and decimate Jabba's bizarre forces, Luke goes off to resume his Jedi training with the venerable Yoda and the others rejoin the rebels. Told he can't become a full-fledged Jedi Knight until he confronts his father, Darth Vader, Luke joins his friends on a mission to knock out the deflector shield which protects the still-under-construction Death Star which the Empire has set up at a remote outpost on the forest-covered Moon of Endor.

Thinking the mission is secure, Luke surrenders to the Imperial troops and is taken aboard the Death Star to face his father. Meanwhile, Lando (piloting the beloved Millenium Falcon) commands a fleet of rebel fighter planes as they move in to attack the Death Star when the deflector shield goes down. So the wild, whiz-bang finale takes place on three levels: 1) A guerilla battle in the forest where Han, Leia, Chewie and the droids struggle to capture the Imperial outpost (aided by feisty, furry little animal warriors called Ewoks, distant cousins to the Wookies); 2) A dazzling battle in space; and 3) The psychological confrontation (you might call it "Duelling Forces") between Luke and Darth on the Death Star.

THERE ARE a few more plot surprises about birthrights and destinies, but I wouldn't dream of spoiling anyone's fun by revealing them here. More noteworthy are the marvelous alien critters on display throughout the movie, from silly little Muppets to stop-motion animated friends.

Jabba and his gruesome entourage are so hilariously weird and surreal, they make the denizens of Star Wars' famous cantina scene look like the cast of "Leave it to Beaver." And those Ewoks are a merchandiser's dream, the ultimate teddy-bears who love you back. (Much of the credit for their appeal goes to sound wizard Bed Burtt, who deserves an Oscar for every single Ewok on the screen!)

Richard Marquand directs at a sure, breakneck pace and leaves plenty of emotional space for the personal drama of Luke's crisis of faith. Scenes of low-flying air scooters racing through the forests and rebel ships careening through the hi-tech bowels of the Death Star are among the most exciting action sequences ever committed to film.

There's a great catharsis early on when all the familiar heroes (who have sneaked into the sequence and the movie separately, in disguise) suddenly reveal themselves as a fighting team to escape from Jabba's massive desert barge. And the film makers are canny enough to bring all the major characters, living and dead, back for a final, euphoric curtain call.

There's also a new grace and maturity among the young actors in this, their final "graduation" exercise. No longer the breathless, pretty blond beach boy, Hamill deepens Luke into a strong, thoughtful hero, believably mythic yet still very human. As Han, Ford is as entertainingly brash as ever, but less clownish. And while Fisher's Leia is still a gutsy fighter (she gets to deliver the coup de grace to the reprehensible Jabba), she's more womanly and composed than the spoilt, snippy girl of the earlier films.

And, as always, the under-rated Anthony Daniels does a superior mime performance inside Threepio's golden shell, especially when he acts out the entire Star Wars saga (while narrating in an "alien" tongue) before a rapt audience of Ewoks gathered round the campfire.

Return of the Jedi is not flawless. Too much cross-cutting to Darth's face (er, mask) as the Emperor zaps Luke with the Force drags out that critical moment and drains the suspense. And the show-stopping special effects sometimes get in the way. The desert scenes are marred by surprisingly obvious process outlines, and there are so many ships zooming around in so many directions in the climactic space battle that it's hard to see who's doing what to whom.

The ending is a little unsettling. Since no new leader is suggested to replace the deposed Emperor, we come away feeling that the entire galaxy has just been plunged into political chaos.

Still, you can't beat Return of the Jedi for sheer rambunctious excitement or the pure pleasure of spending time with endearing characters who have by now become very old and dear friends. Tune out all the hype and go see it.

Octopussy: This is the 13th screen adventure of Ian Fleming's suave Agent 007 with Roger Moore who stars as Bond for the sixth time. Psycho II: Bathtime is playtime as Norman Bates returns home in this sequel to the classic thriller starring Anthony Perkins as the quirky, rehabilitated Bates, whose penchant for running into the best assortment of cutlery in town is exceeded only by his willingness to be a regular guy. Return of the Jedi: The new film which continues George Lucas' epic adventure which began with Star Wars and The Empire Strikes Back, is packed with action and surprises which answer all of the saga's previously unresolved questions. The Man With Two Brains: Steve Martin's dazed heart — smitten by Kathleen Turner — affects his rational powers as a surgeon. Rated R. At the Center Cinemas.

Tootsie: When Dustin Hoffman cannot find work as an actor, he tries and succeeds as an actress. Lots of good fun and some tender moments result when Hoffman, as masquerading Tootsie, falls in love with his girlfriend. With Jessica Lange, Charles Durning and Bill Murray. Rated PG. At the Dream Theater.

Trading Places: A satire on the art of American avarice, Dan Aykroyd and Eddie Murphy play two men whose paths were never meant to cross. Aykroyd is wealthy, then out on the streets and Murphy is a born hustler, a born loser and within the plot, a suddenly rich hustler. With Ralph Bellamy and Don Ameche as the conniving Duke brothers. Rated R. At the Center Cinemas.

WarGames: David Lightman, played by Matthew Broderick, has only one interest in life — the world he escapes to through his home computer. By dialing the telephone and inserting a program into his machine, he "hitchhikes" through his universe, travelling on vast communications networks and "talking" to people like himself. Along the way, he also taps into huge computer banks and changes data. One day he unwittingly crossed paths with the biggest games program in the world — the Defense Department's wargames computer, Joshua. Rated PG. At the State Three Cinemas.

Film Society offers classics

The Monterey Peninsula Film Society will present Marianne & Juliane, in German with English subtitles, at 8:15 p.m. Thursday, June 9, Friday, June 10 and Saturday, June 11.

Wise Blood, from the novel by Flannery O'Connor, is scheduled at 8:15 p.m. on Wednesday, June 15. Both films will be shown in the Morse Auditorium of the Monterey Institute of International Studies, 425 Van Buren St., Monterey.

Marianne & Juliane, directed by Margarethe Von Trotta, with Jutta Lampe and Barbara Sukowa, is the story of two sisters and the political turmoil of Germany in the 1970s. It is based on the life of a member of the notorious Baader-Meinhof group and is a moving and penetrating portrait of the desperate politics of a chaotic era and the lives transformed by it.

Wise Blood, directed by John Houston with Brad Dourif and Ned Beatty, is about the bizarre attempts of Hazel Motes to escape from his childhood of hellfire and fundamentalist teachings.

To do this, he sets up his own "church without Christ," where "the blind don't see, the lame don't walk and what's dead stays that way." It was voted one of the 10 best films of the year for 1980.

Tickets are $3.50 general admission, $2.75 for students, seniors and military and $2 for Film Society members and are available at the door.

Western Film Festival at Sunset

The Great American Western Film Festival will close its season with the presentation of Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid at 8 p.m. Tuesday, June 14 in Sunset Theater, Carmel.

Paul Newman and Robert Redford are two amiable bank robbers caught out of their element when the old West changes at the turn of the century. The movie is considered to be part parody, part tragedy, part Western, part anti-Western, part fiction and part fact.

J. Thomas sings the hit single, "Raindrops Keep Fallin' On My Head," written by Bert Bacharach.

Also starring in the film are Katharine Ross, Strother Martin and Cloris Leachman. The film was cited for many awards including the Academy Awards for best cinematography, screenplay, original score and song; the National Board of Review for best picture; Film Daily for best picture, cinematography, original story, screenplay, original score and song.

Tickets are $2 each and will be available at the box office on the evening of the performance.

Film Gallery presents an old classic

The Film Gallery of Monterey Peninsula College will present the 1950 film, Woman of Distinction, at 8 p.m. Friday, June 10 in the theater at Monterey Peninsula College, 980 Fremont St., Monterey.

The black and white film stars Rosalind Russell and Ray Milland. It depicts a woman college dean pursued and tormented by a charming visiting lecturer who threatens her very proper reputation. The film represents one of the earliest film treatises on attitudes about sexual equality.

General admission is $2 at the door. For more information, phone 646-4051.

Charges don't cover the cost

By RICHARD TYLER

THOSE OF US involved in the arts and who gain so much from the creative process know how valuable they are.

Sometimes we forget that others do not necessarily look on creative expression as we do. What follows is an attempt to marshall arguments for people to support the arts.

Wilson Riles, former California Superintendent of Public Instruction, summed it up neatly when he said: "As our world becomes more hectic and mechanized, the arts are an inexhaustible source of inspiration and fulfillment for the human spirit. The arts are no more a frill than spelling."

In 1978, California was 53rd among the 50 states and five trust territories in arts funding which spent only 6.5 cents per person. Since then, we have moved up rather quickly to 15th or 16th place in the country with 50 cents per person. New York spends more than $1.75 per person and Alaska nearly $2 per person.

A recent Harris Poll in California revealed that:

- 60 percent thought there should be "more creative activities"
- 65 percent went to an art museum at least once a year
- 50 percent attended live performance of theater, classical music, and dance
- 55 percent wanted more arts activities for their children in and out of school
- 80 percent favored government support of the arts.

California is second only to New York in the number of artists who live in the state. Based on estimates from the State Franchise Tax Board, it is conservatively estimated that California artists contributed more than $80 million in state income tax in this past year.

Arts activities enhance the economic vitality of a community. They generate revenues to hotels, restaurants, parking lots, retail businesses, and transportation systems.

"The arts, rather than representing an expenditure by the city, are, in fact, seed money which generates many times its original cost in revenues for the city. In looking at the argument against cuts in cities' budgets in the area of the arts, it can be seen that what might be considered as a frill by some, is, in fact, the livelihood for many." (The Taxpayers' Revolt and the Arts U.S. Conference of Mayors' Position Paper. September, 1978.)

A Fortune magazine market research survey found that corporate decisions to remain or invest in new locales are influenced by the quality of living in those communities — including the cultural activities available. The financial problems of non-profit arts organizations do not stem from lack of attendance or public interest.

The main reason for financial difficulties despite soaring attendance is that the arts are labor intensive. Labor and other production costs have risen while many arts organizations continue to provide their services free or charge a fee which does not cover their production expenses. The need for the arts as a source of inspiration and fulfillment for us all is argument best presented in your own words based on your own experience.

Albert Camus said: "We have art in order not to die of life." He also said: "In the midst of winter I found there was, within me, an invincible summer."

Backgammon

Which blot to hit?

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

You, White, roll 4-2 in the diagrammed position. How do you play it? (Note that you have a man on the bar.)

You must come in from the bar on Black's 4-point. The question is which blot to hit with the two.

Most players would automatically hit the blot in Black's home board without even considering the possibility of hitting the blot on his own 4-point.

Nevertheless, the blot to hit is the one in your own home board. The blot in Black's board is not doing you any harm, and you don't really want to get a fifth Black man choking up your board. The blot on your 4-point is a bone in your throat; you don't want Black to make that point and thus have an advanced anchor in your board.

Even if Black hits you right back, you will still be ahead, with only three men back while your opponent has four men back. If you are hit, moreover, you then won't mind hitting the blot on Black's 3-point and getting a fifth man back because your timing will be better for playing against a back game.

A final argument. You don't mind making the hit with a man from your overloaded 6-point. You can get along quite nicely with only three or four men on that point.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send $1 plus a stamped, self-addressed No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

Culture-broadening show in Carmel

By SCOTT MACCLELLAND

JAVANESE MUSIC and dance seem to have held off the great cultural neutralizer — television — about as well as any ancient and popular tradition. Questions may exist about the future veracity of the gamelan tradition, but its immediate sensual impact continues to fascinate.

Gamelan concerts on the Monterey Peninsula may be rare but they are not unknown. What gave the University of California, Santa Cruz gamelan concert last Friday at Sunset Center its uniqueness was dance. The paucity of gamelan exposure here undoubtedly accounts for the small turnout at Sunset. The response the following night on the UCSC campus, to understate the issue, overflowed the hall.

In Java and Bali, gamelan music and dance go together. So do gamelan music and shadow and epic drama, and gamelan music and martial arts. Lou Harrison is perhaps the single most influential proponent of gamelan music in this country. But Harrison's formative advocacy on behalf of Javanese music left the broader context of the tradition to subsequent generations.

Undang Sumarna, David Kilpatrick, and many others have built an important center for study and realization of that tradition at UCSC. The Indonesian government's "Gift Gamelan" to the university recognizes and acknowledges it. The enthusiastic growth in interest on the UCSC campus and at UC, Berkeley, vigorously underscores it.

Musicians and dancers from both campuses participated in the Carmel program.

•

WHILE JAVANESE dance itself made its debut here, the pencak silat, a martial art form, made the strongest and clearest impression. This was due largely to the militant staging of combat and virtuoso solo with swords, an imagery that was less tied to national folklore and legend and, thus, demanded less audience foreknowledge.

This pencak opened with a "sinfonia" for drums and shawm and led to two formal dances — the first slow, the next fast — then a pugilistic display in free rhythm. At one moment a dancer turned and attacked one of the drummers, reminding that this, and all, such dances are essentially popular and impulsive. The opening instrumental piece, including gong, pays homage to all past pencak adherents and practitioners.

Even without studying the program notes ahead for story line, the quality of the dancing was unmistakable. Joan Lauritzen's solo portrayal of Gatokaca, a Sundanese hero possessing magical powers, including the ability to fly, combined formal poses with fluid motion and contained them in an all-body involving poise and balance that kept attention riveted on the character.

Her slowly shaped motions and darting insect-like gestures bespoke uncommon concentration and strength. The costume for her dance featured a fanciful warrior head-dress and stylish papier mache wings in finely polished design.

Suzanne Suwanda, Dena Bjornle and dancing director Pamela Rogers achieved similar focus throughout the evening, though an understanding of the style and the legends depicted allowed considerable more audience differentiation of the subtleties and varieties of expression. Debra Lurie performed a social dance governed by strict, formal rules of highly stylized refinement, Lenyepan Putri.

The musicians in the gamelan were led by Sumarna, the drummer whose forte is principally the Sundanese style of his native Java. Herman Suwanda, who came to the United States in 1981, was the drummer whose specialty in the marital arts made the pencak possible for the first time in the UC curriculum.

This program enriched culture in Carmel and yet only sowed the seeds that now must be nurtured. Probably UCSC's next visit to the Monterey Peninsula will rather show off another of the campus' fine arts programs.

By JEAN THURMAN

Skywalking: The Life and Films of George Lucas, by Dale Pollock. (Harmony Books. 304 pages.)

YOU MAY look askance at a biography of a filmmaker younger than 40 who has only actually directed three feature films. Your scepticism would be correct if this were truly a biography.

Where Skywalking succeeds is in its detail of the education of a film-maker and the actual film-making itself.

George Lucas led such an all-American childhood that the first chapters read like the basis for a television sit-com, or a study of the typical American childhood. In an effort to make Lucas' childhood interesting, Pollock has included a mass of trivial details.

Do we really want to know that George's favorite story was Goldilocks and the Three Bears, or that his favorite comic figure was Scrooge McDuck? What is more interesting and relevant to his film American Graffiti is young Lucas' infatuation with rock 'n roll and race cars.

But the real interest in this book starts when Lucas starts film school at the University of Southern California. At the time he started film school, students didn't consider themselves as future moviemakers. They were making films as art or tools, and would make avant-garde films, or documentaries, or industrial or propaganda films. But this generation of film students gave us George Lucas, Steven Spielburg, Francis Coppola, John Milius, Brian DePalma, and Martin Scorsese, among others.

George Lucas has not made a lot of films. He has only actually directed three, aside from student films: THX 1138, American Graffiti and Star Wars. In addition to these he has produced The Empire Strikes Back, Return of the Jedi, Raiders of the Lost Ark (and its forthcoming sequel), and More American Graffiti.

But what he lacks in quantity he makes up for in profitability and popularity. American Graffiti returned more profit per dollar invested than any other movie to date. Lucas has made three of the top five money-making movies. He has made enough money to form his own production company and build a ranch devoted to film-making.

His most important achievement, according to his own terms, is freeing himself from the control of the studios. The final editing privileges were taken from him with both American Graffiti and THX 1138, and he has made certain this will never happen again. Artistic control has always been of the utmost importance to Lucas, and he has sacrified increases in salary to guarantee it.

Pollock is especially good in detailing the making of Lucas' feature films. Each one was so very hard to do and so full of disasters that it is hard to believe they ever made it to the screen, and that they were any good once they got there.

To give one example: "On March 26, 1976, the day after Star Wars started production, it rained. It hadn't rained during the Tunisian winter in 50 years. There were mudholes everywhere and the first location was supposed to be a dry lakebed, the Choft Dierid."

Then, before the end of the filming, Mark Hamill was in a bad automobile accident and required extensive plastic surgery. All his remaining scenes had to be filmed at a distance using a double. None of the "gadgets" ever worked. "R2-D2's electronic controls were designed to enable him to shuttle forward, turn, and move laterally, but they only succeeded in picking up Tunisian radio signals."

"Typical," says Lucas.

THE MAKING of the first of the trilogy, Star Wars, is especially exciting to read about because George had practically no reputation, and nobody involved with the film or the studio had any idea what a success it would be. Lucas himself didn't expect more than a moderate success, and he was afraid it would bomb.

He had to keep asking for more and more money from the studio and only Alan Ladd had faith in him. "It's possibly the greatest picture ever made," he said to the Fox board. "That's my absolute statement."

When Star Wars opened, Lucas was on a much-needed vacation in Hawaii. Fox kept phoning him with the news that Star Wars was grossing more per theater than any other film ever, and Lucas could only say: "Wow...gee...that's amazing." The reader, of course, knows this in advance, but it's still exciting to read about the fear and tension, and we can laugh at all the worries at Fox.

The making of the subsequent movies is every bit as interesting, but it is glossed over more, as the suspense is no longer there. There were the same number of diasters and cost overruns, and after Star Wars it was Lucas's money (except for the flop More American Graffiti, that no one likes to talk about).

Pollock is a good storyteller, once he gets to the good part. The making of THX 1138, American Graffiti, and Star Wars is as exciting as any novels, the way he tells it. He certainly provides the detail and minor incidents that fans will crave, but his stabs at psychological biography fail, and his oft-repeated parallels between Luke Skywalker and George Lucas are annoying.

Skywalker succeeds as a history of Lucas's various films and as a look at today's film industry, but fails as a biography. The author tries to give depth to his subject through trivia, but fails to make us understand Lucas' motivations or the reasons for his incredible success.

There is no waiting list for tickets returned. At 10:30 a.m., the day of the concert only, the festival office will give a limited quantity of priority numbers for tickets released for resale. These tickets can be purchased at the theater box office one-half hour before the performance. Ticket sales will continue at the festival office until sold out.

Musicians performing in the 46th Carmel Bach Festival are scheduled to arrive for rehearsals on June 23. Donations of vegetables, dips, cookies, cheese, crackers and snacks will be accepted at the festival office from June 23 through July 1.

Volunteers are needed to carry banners and candles for the concerts at the Carmel Mission Basilica. This season, music from the cathedrals of Spain will be performed at this special concert on July 13, 20 and 27. For more information to sign up as a carrier, phone the festival office at 624-1521.

Workshop on breast cancer

A free workshop on breast cancer is scheduled from 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. Monday, June 13 in the Education Center at Monterey Peninsula Hospital, formerly Eskaton Monterey Hospital, at 576 Hartnell St., Monterey.

The workshop is coordinated by John Baldwin, M.D. Current Concepts of Breast Cancer — a Modern Dilemma, will include a discussion on the possible causes of breast cancer, along with diagnosis, surgery, breast reconstruction, alternatives to major surgery (radiation) and the role of chemotherapy.

Panelists include David Holley, M.D., radiology; Roger Shiffman, M.D., internal medicine and Frank Stark, M.D., plastic surgery. Seating is limited and will be on a first-come, first-served basis. The Education Center is located behind the hospital. For more information, phone 625-4505.

Intellectual property seminar

How to legally protect and exploit computer software and other "intellectual property" will be the topic of a seminar offered by the Community Legal Education program at 7 p.m. Thursday, June 16 at the Monterey College of Law, 498 Pearl St., Monterey.

Attorney Wendy S. Buck of the Pacific Grove firm of Bernstein, Zerbe and Buck, will teach the three-hour seminar. A $5 donation will be requested.

Advances in computers and computer software have created new opportunities for the creation, sale and license of property such as computer programs, processes and systems ideas and "know how," according to Glenn Goldberg, director of the Community Legal Education program. These advances have also, however, increased opportunities for piracy, theft and exploitation by unauthorized parties, Goldberg noted.

The seminar, which has been designed for laypersons, will teach participants how they can use the law to protect their creations and discourage or remedy infringements. For pre-registration and more information, phone 373-1959.

United Nations Association group meets

The United Nations Association, Monterey Bay Chapter, will meet at 12 noon Thursday, June 16 in the community room of the Crossroads Shopping Center on Rio Road off Highway 1 in Carmel.

Paul Bremer, executive secretary of the U.S. State Department and special assistant to Secretary George Shultz, will speak on The United Nations Charter: Project Democracy. Ambassador-designate to the Netherlands, Bremer will be introduced by Robert von Pagenhardt, a professor at the Naval Postgraduate School who with Pearl Ross, returned recently from the national UNA conference in New York.

For $3 a light buffet catered by the Carmel Wine and Cheese Company will be offered. Jehanne Salinger Carlson, UNA membership chairman and William Gahagan, Jeffers Tor House director, who were present at the signing of the U.N. charter in San Francisco in 1945, will greet members and friends. A United Nations Charter study group will convene at 1:30 p.m., chaired by Helene Boughton. For reservations for the lunch, phone 372-6185.

Women's peace groups to meet

The Monterey Peninsula chapters of Women's International League for Peace and Freedom and Women's Action for Nuclear Disarmament will meet for potluck supper at 6:30 p.m. in the community room of the Crossroads Shopping Center, on Rio Road off Highway 1 in Carmel.

The groups will present an evening of the history of their organizations with slides, posters and presentations. The event is free and open to the public. Those who plan to attend should bring food to share and utensils. For more information, phone 659-3758.

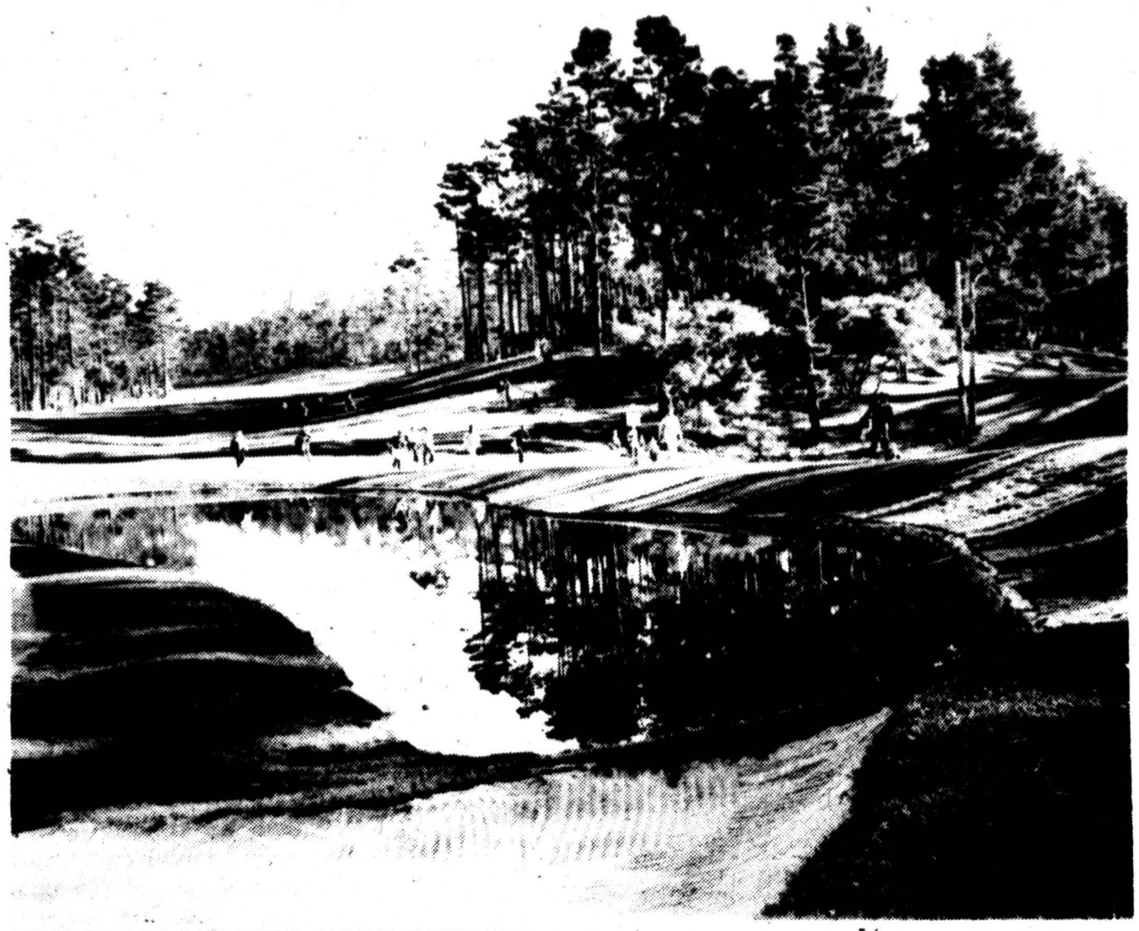
Changes at 'senior net' event

Beautiful Spyglass links are site of golf tourney



THE SPYGLASS HILL GOLF COURSE in Pebble Beach will be the site for the 22nd annual Senior Net Championship sponsored by the Northern California Golf Association scheduled for Thursday, June 9 and Friday, June 10. The 55-to-64 and 65-to-74 age groups will begin play at 7:30 a.m. Thursday morning and those 75 years of age and up will begin at 12:30 p.m.

Orv Hanners of Palo Alto returns to defend his winning title at the 22nd annual Senior Net Tournament at 7:30 a.m. Thursday, June 9 and at 7:30 a.m. Friday, June 10 at Spyglass Hill Golf Course in Pebble Beach.

Tournament director of the Northern California Golf Association, sponsor of the Senior Net Tournament, is Roger Val.

"This tournament has been growing in recent years. We had 465 entries this year. Our oldest entry is 90-year-old Elmer Harris," Val said.

The tournament has organized its age categories a little differently this year, according to Val. There are 21 teams, three from each zone, with three age flights: C class includes participants from 55 to 64 years, B class is 65 to 74 years, and the A class is 75 years of age and older.

The B and C class groups need to qualify by attending sectional tournaments. "The A group can by-pass the sectionals. This year we have 58 members entered," Val said. The B and C groups will begin to play at 7:30 a.m. each day and the A group will begin at 12:30 p.m. They will all play 36 holes (18 each day) and play to a 100 per cent handicap. There will be first, second and third place winners for each age flight.

The Northern California Golf Association, with headquarters at Spyglass Hill golf course, is divided into seven zones. For this tournament, each member club provides one four-man team. The top three teams from each zone will then compete Sept. 8 and 9 for the zone championships.

"Everybody loves to come play here, naturally, and they're treated well when they're here. No wonder they're all trying hard to win to get back here in September," Val added.

The NCGA office was established in 1967, the same year Spyglass Hill golf course was built by Robert Trent Jones, Jr. The staff members at the Spyglass Hill location are John Zoller, executive director, Bill Paulson, assistant executive director and George Schaaf, special projects.

Other staff members are Elizabeth Napier, handicap secretary; Elizabeth Bush, secretary-receptionist; Nancy Stanley, course rating secretary; Claudia Jackson, tournament secretary; Kiereen Potter, executive secretary; Loyce Wagner, secretary, administration and finance and Barbara Fenton, handicap secretary. The NCGA executive committee chairman is Francis A. Watson, Jr. of the Orinda Country Club.

The NCGA is building a golf course in Pebble Beach that is expected to be completed this year. "Poppy Hills has been seven years in the making and we will be the only association to own and operate our own golf course," Val said. "It will be designed by Robert Trent Jones, Jr.," he added.

The purpose of the NCGA organization is to provide services to its members and member clubs such as tournaments, handicapping, course rating and amateur status. There is also the Women's Golf Association of Northern California and the Pacific Women's Golf Association.

"There are 90,000 members and the women's clubs," Val said. "It's my job to run all the tournaments the NCGA provides. We also do the USGA qualifying in this area," he added.

"The tournaments are all age, handicap or area. We try and run a program to maintain something for all our members and all members have the opportunity to play in the zones," Val explained.

There are tournaments for public links and different styles of tournaments such as stroke play and match play. "There are even tournaments where the participants have to qualify in stroke play and the tournament itself is done in match play," Val added.

Tournaments the NCGA has scheduled this year include zone games, a two-man championship, the NCGA/CIF high school championship, the senior championship, the senior net championship and the California Golf Association Amateur championship, scheduled for June 19-25 at Pebble Beach golf links, Cypress Point Club, the Carmel Valley Country Club and the Old Del Monte golf course.

Other competitions include the junior amateur championship, the master division stroke play, the public links championship, the NCGA amateur championship, the zone championship playoff, the NCGA/NCPGA cup matches and the two-man better-ball net championship.

For more information on the NCGA write to P.O. Box NCGA, Pebble Beach, Calif. 93953 or phone 625-4653.

Out on a limb

How you can help

By GARY KELLY
Acting City Forester

Carmel Beach is a cornerstone in what makes our village beautiful and unique. As you know, this cornerstone was battered badly by Mother Nature during the past winter. As a result, city staff, commissions, and council members have directed the focus of their attention toward developing a plan that will minimize further losses and restore what has already been damaged.

The white sands of Carmel Beach have provided artists and authors with inspiration. They have furnished scores of visitors and residents with a place to relax, reflect or enjoy a vigorous walk or jog.

Our sand is matchless in its beauty as well as its source. Unlike neighboring beaches along the coast, Carmel's sand does not come from the rivers emptying into the ocean. Ours is produced by the wave action on rocks and sandstone in the bay.

Therefore, our source of sand may be limited or vary year to year. Additionally, Carmel Bay has a deep and large underwater canyon that ushers away unknown amounts of sand each year that does not return in the spring.

The present condition of the beach indicates that it is in a fragile state. Care must be taken to protect our slopes and white sand. We, as a community, have the opportunity to help in the care of this most important cornerstone.

Help by offering suggestions to members of the forestry commission and city council. Help by supporting decisions that are in the best interest of the beach. Help by explaining to your visitors the fragile nature of our beach and ask that they respect its condition.

The damage done by winter storms and wave action are past for now. The erosion and deterioration now occurring are caused by people who use the already-eroded beach slopes as avenues to reach the sand and shoreline. To prevent this, the city council has called for the placement of a fence along Scenic Drive.

Although distasteful to some, this fence is temporary and represents the first step in guarding this treasured cornerstone. I suggest that the inconvenience this fence may cause be thought of as a small and temporary price to pay in the monumental rebuilding process of this most treasured resource.

A farmers' market at at MPC

Monterey Peninsula College will open a weekly farmers' market on its campus at 2:30 p.m. Thursday, June 9 in the upper parking lot near the Armory on the campus of Monterey Peninsula College, 980 Fremont St., Monterey.

Approximately 25 stands will be open to sell seasonal vegetables, fruits, flowers, eggs, honey, nuts and more. Farmers will come largely from the Monterey Peninsula area but some will come from as far away as Bakersfield to sell high quality agricultural products. No second grade products will be permitted in the market.

The market involves members of a farmers' cooperative who travel to various locations in the Monterey, Salinas and Santa Cruz areas each week. All produce has been personally grown by the sellers and is usually picked the day before the sale. No gases or waxes are used and many of the farmers use all organic, natural growing techniques. Prices are considered competitive with the general market.

The farmers' market will run each Thursday through the summer and fall from 2:30 p.m. until dusk. For more information, phone 646-4190. Visitors to the MPC campus are required to purchase a 25-cent parking permit.

New River School principal faces a familiar challenge here in Carmel

By MICHAEL GARDNER

FINANCIAL SHORTFALLS, closure of elementary schools and declining enrollment are nothing new to Rosemary Montgomery, the new principal of Carmel River Elementary School.

The Carmel Unified School District Board of Education hired Mrs. Montgomery May 23. She is now the principal of Kings-Beach Elementary School in Truckee. She will replace Vance Frasier, who has been reassigned to a classroom teaching position.

Mrs. Montgomery was hired from a field of more than 175 applicants. Ten hopefuls were interviewed and the district screening committee visited the schools of two applicants before it decided on Mrs. Montgomery, Supt. William Rand explained.

"Rosemary is an experienced administrator. She has demonstrated excellent curriculum skills and leadership," Rand said. "We think she has what it takes to provide excellent managerial skills for the students of River School, the parents and staff."

The challenges at Carmel River School and the entire school district are comparable to what confronted her at Kings-Beach, Mrs. Montgomery told the Pine Cone/Outlook in a telephone interview May 25.

"They're very similar. We closed one elementary school, we have financial problems caused by Prop. 13 and we have declining enrollment," she said.

Mrs. Montgomery's philosophy is that educators need to develop the "whole" child.

"As far as back-to-basics is concerned, I don't feel we've ever left that at the elementary level," she said. "A good basic education is important, but I'm really strong on thinking skills.

"Sometimes we've been so worried about finishing books that we haven't taken the time to do those other things," she said.

"We need to look at the whole person, not just intellectually. A child is a social, emotional and physical human being as well as intellectual. They're just like us."

The move to Carmel will enable Mrs. Montgomery to continue her educational growth based on these philosophies.

"I'm really interested in early childhood development and I would like to go back to school. That's hard up here in Tahoe. Working in Carmel will allow me to go back to school in childhood development," she explained.

•

MRS. MONTGOMERY will enter her 23rd year in education when she assumes the Carmel River School principalship this fall.

A 1960 graduate of San Jose State University, Mrs. Montgomery taught elementary school in the Santa Clara Unified School District for nine years.

One of her former teaching colleagues in Santa Clara, Mary Jane Stanford, is now the principal at Tularcitos Elementary School in Carmel Valley.

Mrs. Montgomery then taught special education students for four years at Loma Prieta in the Santa Cruz mountains.

After she passed her administrative credential examination through San Jose State University, she accepted a position as teaching principal of Rideout Elementary School in the Lake Tahoe area.

She transferred to North Tahoe Intermediate School (similar to Carmel Middle School) and served as assitant principal there until she became the principal of Kings-Beach Elementary School in 1978.

Mrs. Montgomery will also celebrate another 23rd anniversary this year. This one commemorates her marriage to John Montgomery, a photographer, and television producer and director.

Her husband worked at the Salinas television station KSBW in 1969. He is also a folk singer and at at one time he performed a duet with John Stuart.

Mrs. Montgomery has three daughters, all of whom live away from home.

The couple plans to move to the Carmel area this summer.

ROSEMARY MONTGOMERY, currently principal of an elementary school in the Tahoe area, is the new Carmel River School principal. She was hired by the board of education May 23 and will assume her new duties this September.

MIRA 'star party' scheduled

The Monterey Institute for Research in Astronomy will conduct a free public "star party" from 8 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. Saturday, June 11 on San Benancio Road, located four miles south of Highway 68.

The comet Sugano-Saigusa-Fujikawa was discovered by three Japanese amateur astronomers last month. Current predictions indicate that it will be visible with binoculars on the weekend of June 11 when it makes its closest approach to earth.

In conjunction with this event, the MIRA Amateur Astronomy Group invites the public to view the comet through binoculars and small telescopes. If the object is bright enough, it may be viewed with the naked eye. Members of MIRA's professional staff will be available to help locate the comet and to describe current astrophysical understanding of comets.

In addition to the comet, a program on astronomy with binoculars participants bring will be offered by Ed Allen. David Shonman, chairman of the Friends of MIRA, will describe the June constellations.

Participants are advised to wear warm clothes, bring a flashlight and a blanket to sit on. Those persons who have binoculars should bring them. Children are welcome to attend. For more information, phone 375-3220.

Job fair/career day in Seaside

The Human Relations Commission of the City of Seaside will conduct a job fair/career day from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, June 11, at Oldemeyer Center, at the corner of Hilby and Wheeler streets in Seaside.

The general public and students are encouraged to attend the job fair/career day at no charge. The event is designed to provide an opportunity to those people who are seeking employment in a job or career which will be of interest to them. Job representatives from governmental agencies and from the private sector will be available to present employment opportunities with their agencies.

Job seekers should bring a resume and come dressed and prepared for interviews. For more information, phone 899-6200.

Lunch scheduled to honor local doctor

The Family Resource Center of Monterey County will give an alfresco lunch for Dr. Talcott Bates at 12 noon Saturday, June 11 at Memory Gardens, 210 Oliver St., Monterey.

The cost is $7.50 per person or $75 per table for 10. All proceeds will support the services provided by the Family Resource Center. Reservations must be made in advance.

The lunch will honor Dr. Bates' many years of contributions to the local and national child abuse field. He was a founder of the Child Abuse Prevention Council of the Monterey Peninsula in 1974 and has been a leader in promoting community awareness of the problem of child abuse. He is also one of the founding members of the Family Resource Center, established in 1978 for the prevention of child abuse.

The lunch will also mark the establishment of the Talcott Bates, MD Child Abuse Prevention fund. For reservations or more information, phone the Family Resource Center at 394-4622.

Carmel Youth Baseball season half finished

By DOROTHY MEHEEN

THE MUSTANG and Bronco games have been moving right along.

The first half of the season has ended for both divisions, with Dick Bruhn the big winner for the Mustang Division. The managers for Dick Bruhn are Jerry Rotharmel and Todd Bliesner. Nielsen Market was the winner in the Bronco Division, with Ron Gill and Allan Smith as managers.

Mustang Division

On Tuesday, May 31, Dick Bruhn came up from behind to defeat Rudy Harris 11-7. Brett Abernathy was winning pitcher. Some beautiful hits were made for Dick Bruhn by Andy Rotharmel with a triple, and Aaron Bliesner and Benedict Jones with a double each.

The following Thursday, County Mounties won over Carmel Insurance 11-2; Daniel Higgens pitched the win. County Mounties held Carmel Insurance to only one hit during the game, which was made by Aimee Ferro. Chris Prieto tripled and went 2/3 for County Mounties, and Chris Bolton and Sky Feekes also came up with nice hits for the winning team.

Last Saturday, Rudy Harris defeated Carmel Insurance 20-10. Rudy Harris played a great game with a lot of good pitching, including pitcher of record Chris Palumbo. There was also a lot of good hitting by Ivo Staino, who tripled and went 2/4, Scott Allen who doubled and went 5/5, and Adam Jowett and Mario Bertolucci who each went 2/5.

Hitters for Carmel Insurance were Greg Jackson with a 3/3 and Devin Meheen with a 2/3. Aimee Ferro came through with another beautiful single also for Carmel Insurance.

Bob Jones and Kathryn Abernathy were hoping for a quick game when Dick Bruhn met Orange Julius directly following on Saturday. Both Bob and Kathryn have sons on Dick Bruhn and got married immediately after the game, with their sons, Benedict and Bret as "best men."

Well, as best laid plans usually go, the game went longer than anticipated due to Dick Bruhn's fabulous hits and runs! Bob and Kathryn still made it to the altar — better late than never — very happy about their big win 21-2. Derek Bomsper pitched the win, with big hitters Andy Rothermal and Jon Shoemaker each with a triple, a double and going 3/3, a double for Danny Kleinbardt with a 2/2, and Benedict Jones, going 3/3.

Minor League Girls' Softball

On May 24 we saw Straw Hat come out ahead of Wolfpack 10-7. Tori Roche was pitcher of record. Tori and Nancy Rubin made some great hits for Straw Hat, including a triple each.

Bronco Division

When La Playa gets a win, they really leave the crowds with something to talk about. After their last nine-inning win, they upset Pine Inn's six-run lead by scoring seven runs in the bottom of the sixth. The final score was 13-12, and Kevin Winton pitched the win.

Key doubles for La Playa in the sixth were made by Clyde Klaumann and Eric Cederstrom. The fans sat in shock when Chip Meheen slid into home to tie the game, and went wild shortly thereafter when Clyde Klaumann came in for the winning run.

Edward Han also doubled for La Playa, and Eric LeTowt had two beautiful singles. There was a lot of action in the field too. Second baseman Mindy Faia made an incredible lunge to catch Russell Peavey's hard hit line drive, and both teams had double plays.

Pine Inn had some great hits, including a double by Donovan Sinton, who also went 2/3, Adam Green with a 2/3 and Jeff Perkins with a 2/4.

On June 1, Nielsen Market was again a winner, and defeated Carmel Valley Disposal 10-4. Scott Gill was the winning pitcher. Sean Morton and Scott Smith collected hits, including a double for Scott.

The next evening, Pine Inn had a big win over Derek Rayne 11-1, with 11 runs on 11 hits as Russell Peavey pitched the win. Russell also did well at bat with a double and a single, along with David Faber with two singles, Donovan Sinton with a single and a double, Adam Green with two singles, and Steve White with a double and a single. Steve Szaszy made a great flying-dive catch for Derek Rayne on third base.

Talk about excitement last Saturday afternoon! First, Carmel Valley Disposal defeated Derek Rayne by a narrow margin of 8-7. The game was tied until the bottom of the seventh when Jim Withenshaw stole home for the winning run. Carmel Valley Disposal pitchers did a great job, pitching a four-hitter game, with Brandon Kirsch pitcher of record.

There was a lot of good hitting too. For Carmel Valley Disposal, Mike Sobel and Jason Vogelpohl both tripled, Gerson Perry doubled and went 3/4, Gabe Galester went 3/4, and Armando DeAnda and Chris England both went 2/4. Aaron Eppler and Steve Szaszy both doubled for Derek Rayne.

Afterwards, Kevin Winton drove in the winning run for La Playa in the seventh inning as the team defeated Nielsen Market 8-7. Eric Cederstrom pitched the win, Eric and Clyde Klaumann both doubled for La Playa, and Kevin Winton went 3/4. For Nielsen Market, Robert D'Attilio went 3/4 and Paul Tarantino 2/4.

There was a lot of action in the field. Daniel Luster (LP) robbed Christian Sutton of a hard hit to left field and then threw to second base to double off the runner. Eric Cederstrom picked a runner off first and threw to Clyde Klaumann who put the tag on Paul Tarantino. For Nielsen

On Saturday, May 21, Anderson Electric defeated Monterey Peninsula Dental Group by a close margin of 8-7. At bat, Tyana Saxby helped out with a triple and Tiffany Anderson with a double. In the fifth inning, Shelly Pisciotta made a nice bunt and Nancy Penn caught two great flies in the sixth.

On Monday, May 23, Monterey Peninsula Dental Group scored two runs in the bottom of the seventh after two were out on a throwing error to edge out Fouratt 6-5. Christine Reding was pitcher of record. Hitting well for Fouratt was Tammi Klaumann, who doubled and went 3/3.

Fouratt was the winner the following day when they met WWD; the score 9-7. Tammi Klaumann pitched her first victory of the year and Stacey White had a save in relief of Tammi. Janeen Pullen doubled for WWD, Michelle Melicia went 2/2 for Fouratt, and Heidi Silva got her first hit of the year, also for Fouratt.

On June 2, Fouratt edged our Palazzolos 9-6; Stacey White again pitched the win. This was a complete team effort, led by Stacey's pitching and batting. Fouratt played the game using seven seventh graders and three high school girls as the rest of the team was on an eighth grade function. Triples included W. Coen for Palazzolos, and Stacey White doubled, went 4/4, Tammy Fuller went 2/4, and Hallie Levy went 2/4, all for Fouratt. Fawn Bassett had her best game of the year, scoring a run and driving in one run and walking twice.

On Saturday, Fouratt was at it again, to defeat WWD Indians 4-2, with Tammi Klaumann pitcher of record. Michelle Melicia went 2/3 for Fouratt, and Janeen Pullen went 2/2 for WWD. Elvina Scott (F), playing catcher, caught three pop-ups and turned one into a double play by catching a runner off first.

Michelle Melicia, shortstop, made the catch of the day and leaped high in the air to grab a line drive to stall a WWD rally. Kelly Kern laid down a perfect sacrifice bunt to score two runs which won the game for Fouratt. WWD's Laura Hansen caught two fly balls to end Fouratt's scoring chances.

CAROL WOODSON (left) and Susie Faia giggled like a couple of school girls dreaming about some cool guy in his white T-shirt and duck tail in a scene reminiscent of their high school days. Mrs. Woodson and Mrs. Faia were dressed in the clothing of their era during the first "battle of the generations" dance at the Carmel Middle School gym June 4. More than 200 parents and their children attended the dance, which featured costume and dance contests. The dance was a fund-raiser for Carmel Youth baseball.

CHRISTOPHER BOCK

REAL ESTATE
FROM CARMEL VALLEY TO CARMEL BAY

When is a "fixer-upper" worth fixing up?

All of us dream of finding a little cottage, its windows cracked and broken, walls dusty and crumbling, floors creaky and uneven, a jewel lying among ashes. There it sits, over-grown by weeds and brambles, its whole aspect slightly atilt, a veritable Eliza Doolittle poised to play opposite our Professor Higgins.

There are two things wrong with that dream. One, most of the Elizas in Carmel have already been reformed. And two, few of us have the skill and talents of a successful Higgins. If you'll remember, he did his work himself, and he brought to the job enormous knowledge and patience.

The classic objective of "fixing up" is to make money. To be successful at that, you must have the imagination to see that broken-down slattern emerging as a quaint and charming one-of-a-kind, wearing her new paint and fixtures with grace and style, posing among her flagstone paths and terraces as though they'd always been there, reserving her charms for the one perfect buyer.

If you can see that, then you ought to do it. But plan it carefully. If you can do it yourself, good. If you can't, then visualize exactly what you want and line up your costs for carpenters, painters, plumbers, masons, gardeners and all the busy, capable people who'll make your dream come true.

Chances are, if you do it right, you'll fall into Pygmalion's trap, just as Higgins did. You'll have a fair lady on your hands, and you'll never let her go.

If you're up for a little temptation, we have a couple of Elizas for you to see. One is a real Galatea. Remember we warned you. But call us anyway . . . at 624-1838.

MPC dance concert is June 10-11

The Monterey Peninsula College spring dance concert, Kaleidoscope, will be staged at 8 p.m. Friday, June 10 and at 8 p.m. Saturday, June 11 in the theater on the campus, located at 980 Fremont St., Monterey.

This year the MPC dance faculty and students will be joined by three guest choreographer/performers who are alumni of the MPC dance program: Amien Simbel, Beth Wefso and Tracy Rhoads.

The 26-member MPC dance company will perform in modern, jazz, comedic and improvisational styles. The faculty, which includes Walter White, Janet Butler and concert director Dawn Sare, have choreographed the dances to be performed by the students.

White's piece is a fast-moving jazz dance and Ms. Butler's dance, Sun Shower, is a lyrical modern/jazz piece done to the music of Andreas Vollenweider. Ms. Sare has developed two pieces for this concert, Kaleidoscope, using the concept of butterflies in a dance to three different styles of harp music and Serendipity Walk, an improvisational for seven dancers.

Four student choreographers have also contributed to the performance: Laura Akard, Donna DiMartini, Adonna Ezell and Dana Prevost.

Guest performers include Simbel, who left MPC in 1977 to major in dance at California State University in Long Beach. He has performed extensively on the West Coast, including a tour with the Margalit Dance Theatre.

Beth Wefsco, who danced at Carmel High School, MPC and with Joy Berta, now attends the California Institute of the Arts as a dance major. She will perform Kinetic Transmutation with MPC graduate Tracy Rhoads. Rhoads, who will perform a comedic solo, Piano Lesson Number One, studied dance and drama at MPC and performed in many college productions.

Admission to the concert is $3 at the door and $2.50 for students and seniors. For more information, phone 646-4063.
